THE DEAN

Dear Alumni and Friends:

There are 176 law schools in the United States accredited by the American Bar Association, and I have taught at five of them -- South Carolina, William & Mary, Ohio State, Mississippi, and now Kentucky. I have inspected a number of schools for the ABA and have taken several busman's holidays on trips around the country; I like to walk the halls, look at the classrooms, check the library, read the notices on the bulletin boards, and envy the large parking lots. I am a bit of a law school junky who enjoys finding out how other schools handle particular matters and deal with things like budget and personnel problems.

My daughter, who is starting eighth grade this fall and enjoys picking on me, often says that I have a keen sense of the obvious. She is right. Nevertheless, I am struck by the many similarities among law schools such as: Admissions standards go up every year, and many applicants are disappointed. Curriculums generally look alike, and there are always plenty of ideas from lawyers and judges about what schools ought to be teaching. All law schools have some truly outstanding teachers, many have several highly regarded scholars, the majority are trying hard to make the best use of limited funds and discover innovative ways to increase resources, and all law schools are becoming increasingly dependent on financial support from their alumni and friends. These generalizations apply to UK and every other school I know.

There are, of course, many differences between institutions. Each law school has its own culture and history. For instance, some schools have a very stable faculty, while others seem to have constant turnover. There are commuter schools where the students disappear right after classes as well as schools where all the students are heavily involved in a wide range of activities. Private schools do not worry about the legislature and the state budget. Many law libraries are always crowded while some are almost empty -- even during exams. Quite a few schools suffered serious growth pains in the late 1960s and early 1970s. Some schools have always enjoyed a collegial atmosphere while others have a reputation for warring factions and divisive opinions.

I have learned a great deal about the UK College of Law's culture and history during the past year. Sharing morning coffee with Paul Oberst and Fred Whiteside provides a fine education. Elvis Stahr has vivid recollections of his service over forty years ago as dean. The faculty, with three former deans, offers a wealth of knowledge and experience. Moreover, every graduate I have met in the last year enjoys talking about his or her days in law school. You like to discuss the personalities of professors and classmates, pranks, the politics of the time, and so on. I enjoy listening and usually wish I carried a tape recorder.

In some ways we are much like other state supported law schools, but I am very impressed by many attributes which make us stand out -- characteristics which make us an excellent law school. For example, our students are not only very bright (great LSATs and GPAs), they also are friendly and active. They are the life of the school because of their interest and involvement in the school's Moot Court Board, Trial Advocacy Board, SBA, SPILF, KLJ, JNREL, ABLs, the Women's Law Caucus, the Barristers' Ball, the Libel Show, and much more. They keep me and my colleagues challenged.

UK has more than its fair share of truly outstanding teachers and I want it to stay that way. The student evaluations always contain statements such as "Professor _____ is the best ever!" or "I will take him or her for everything they teach!" or "Awesome!" Such statements are made about a dozen different professors, not just two or three. Speaking from experience (that is, after reading my own evaluations), a middle of the road, average sort of teacher at UK Law like me, would be regarded as one of the best at most other law schools.

This talented faculty also has more than its share of nationally regarded scholars. Everyone is doing research and writing major works like treatises, texts, and casebooks. The subject areas include the history of perjury, federal arbitration law, federal criminal law, labor law, housing law, trial ethics, corporate tax, individual taxation, Kentucky domestic relations, and Kentucky criminal law. The faculty's articles, book reviews and commentaries during the last year make a very long list.

You, the College of Law's alumni and friends, also make this a very special institution. All of us at the school are especially grateful for your loyalty and generosity. The College's endowments are growing, membership in the Lafferty Society is increasing, participation in alumni activities is strong, and alumni everywhere are eager to get involved by volunteering to judge moot court, lecture to classes, speak to student groups, and in many other ways.

This has been a very busy year, and next year should be no different. We are excited about the hiring of Assistant Professor Darlene Goring and Associate Professor Herb Cihak, the new Director of the Law Library. The first-year class starting this fall will be excellent and it will include our first two Bert Combs Scholars. We are proud that Professor John Rogers is returning to China on a Fulbright. On the other hand, I hate to mention Professor John Garvey's move to Notre Dame. He has done so much for the intellectual life of this school since 1976. His departure is a major loss, but it also presents one of several challenges and opportunities we will face.

I am confident that with your help, the College of Law can meet its challenges, and take advantage of all its opportunities, in the coming year. After all, the history of this law school shows we always are meeting challenges and doing the right things to become a better law school.

Sincerely,

David E. Shipley

The Happy Return of John Wesley Hatch

By Paul Oberst, Professor of Law Emeritus

In the Spring of 1948 John Hatch was finishing his second year at Kentucky State College in Frankfort and decided he would like to become a lawyer. He applied to the University of Kentucky for admission to the College of Law. The Registrar referred his application to President Donovan, who referred it to the Board of Trustees, who instructed him to refer it to the Attorney General.

The problem? In 1904 the Kentucky legislature had enacted the Day Law "to prohibit white and colored persons from attending the same school". The statute provided for an initial $1,000 fine for a violation and $100 per day for each day it continued. Instructors were subject to the same fines, and students were liable for $50 per day for attending. Berea College, integrated from the beginning, was promptly fined in Madison Circuit Court, and on appeal the Kentucky Court of Appeals sustained the constitutionality of the Day Law in a fatuous opinion by Judge Ed. C. O'Rear (Berea College v. Commonwealth, 123 Ky 209, 94 W.W.623; June 12, 1906). On appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court the decision was affirmed on a procedural technicality over the rousing dissent of Justice John Marshall Harlan (of Danville, Kentucky), who castigated the Court for its refusal to reach the substantive question of violation of the 14th amendment (Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U.S. 45 (1908)).

As for John Hatch's application, a letter from the Attorney General informed President Donovan that the Day Law was in effect and if a Negro were to be admitted into the University, the Attorney General would be compelled to ask the Court to uphold the validity of the Day Law to its full extent.

At this point, the College of Law became inventive. It proposed that John Hatch be admitted to the University of Kentucky and the College of Law for instruction by the regular, full time faculty, but that the instruction be given on the campus of Kentucky State College in order to satisfy the restrictions of the Day Law.

So it came to pass that beginning in September, 1948, the first year instructors met with their classes twice; once in Lexington with a class of over 90, and once at Kentucky State with a class of one. The courses offered were Torts, Contracts, Property, Criminal Law, Domestic Relations, Agency and Common Law Pleading. The instructors were seven members of the eight man faculty of 1948-49: Professors Roy Moreland, Frank Murray, Paul Oberst, A.B. McEwen, W.L. Matthews, Maurice Culp, and Dean Elvis J. Stahr. Each of the seven courses was offered for two hours per day in double sessions in Frankfort to cut down on the travel.

Nonetheless, by mid-November the disruption had been so serious that the commuting faculty was replaced by a faculty of four adjunct professors recruited from the Frankfort bar by Amos Eblen, a pre-war member of the University of Kentucky Law School faculty. Finishing up for the first semester were Amos Eblen, Jo Ferguson '39, Ben Fowler and Vincent Goodlett '40. For the spring semester Eblen and Fowler were joined by Ray Holbrook '34 and Charlie Hobson '47. For the convenience of the student and instructors the site was moved from the Kentucky State campus to the state Capitol. There the Court of Appeals library and conference room were made available for instruction and research, and the arrangement was hailed as a unique opportunity for tutorial instruction by practicing lawyers who were leading members of the Franklin County Bar.

In the meantime on June 21, 1948, the Louisville Chapter of the NAACP filed an action for a declaratory judgment in behalf of Lyman Johnson, a high school history teacher, who had been denied admission to the Graduate School of the University of Kentucky. The case came on for hearing in Federal Court in Lexington on March 30, 1949, before Judge H. Church Ford. Although the University had also offered Johnson off-campus instruction, Judge Ford held it was in no way equal to admission to on-campus instruction and seminars, and ordered the University to admit Negroes to all graduate and professional courses. (See Johnson v. Board of Trustees of University of Kentucky, 83 F.Supp.707 (1949).) This cleared the way for John Hatch to take his third semester in Lafferty Hall.

Counsel for the plaintiff was a New York lawyer named Thurgood Marshall. Counsel for the University was Assistant Attorney General M.B. Holifield who did not take his loss lightly. He wrote a letter to President

Dr. Hatch receiving a commemorative plaque from UK President Charles T. Wethington, Jr.

Donovan pointing out that Judge Ford had held that the tutorial instruction was not equal; not that the Day Law was unconstitutional. He insisted that Negro students were to be admitted only for instructional purposes and not for "socializing" and that the President should so advise the students. Dr. Donovan describes Holifield's advice in his book "Keeping the University Free and Growing." To put it briefly, black students should sit together in the classroom and cafeteria and apart from the white students as far as possible at least for the first year.

When John Hatch arrived at Lafferty Hall for his third semester of law, he promptly took a seat at the far end of the last row in the old classroom amphitheater. But as the rest of the class filed in they seated themselves as closely to Hatch as possible to indicate where they stood. Students also joined him at lunch in the cafeteria, neatly by-passing the table marked "reserved." No problem!

John Hatch left law school after his third semester. The Korean War was on and I heard he had entered the Army. He had indeed, and served from 1952 to 1955. Instead of coming back to law school he finished his A.B. at Knoxville College and then took a Masters at Professor Emeritus Paul Oberst speaking at the Law Day lunch in honor of Dr. John Hatch.

Atlanta University in Social Work. After six years in Boston in three different social work organizations, he joined the faculty of Tufts University for five years, and then went on to Chapel Hill to earn a doctoral degree from the University of North Carolina in Health Education in 1974.

Dr. Hatch has been a member of the faculty of the University of North Carolina since 1971 and now holds the William R. Kenan Chair in Health Behavior and Health Education at the School of Public Health at the University. In the course of his career he has co-authored nine books and over thirty articles in his field and has made presentations around the world. His particular area of expertise has been health promotion and disease prevention in cooperation with black church organizations. He is immediate past moderator of the Medical Commission of the World Council of Churches, Geneva, Switzerland.

All of this time I hadn't a clue as to what had become of John Hatch. By great good fortune Judge Sheila Isaacs of the class of 1977 learned of the existence of John Hatch in Chapel Hill and his Lexington connection. As President of the Fayette County Bar Association she invited him to address the annual Law Day luncheon of the Bar on May 2, 1994.

John Hatch returned to Lexington to a Sunday afternoon reception at the Hyatt, a College of Law breakfast on Monday morning, and the Law Day Luncheon which drew a crowd of over five hundred members of the bar. His classmate, Governor Ned Breathitt, now Chairman of the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees, presented him with a Resolution of the Board commending him for his initiative and courage as a young man in desegregating the University and for his extraordinary contributions thereafter in the field of Public Health.

The subject of Dr. Hatch's Law Day speech was "Just Solutions." It was a call to lawyers to work for needed changes in the allocation of resources in America as they impact black families and children.

As Richard Wilson so well summarized Dr. Hatch's message in the Courier-Journal of May 3:

"While he never became a lawyer, Hatch said he recognizes that the law and lawyers play an important role in society, 'I think lawyers, more than (those in) any other profession, moderate the process through which compromise is reached and resources are distributed in this society,' Hatch said.

But he also said society is in trouble, 'and you know it. I think there are some things that need to happen, and lawyers need to help it to happen,' he added.

The problems, he said, include crime, self-destructive behavior, racial separation, crisis in black families and an ever-growing gap between the wealthy and the poor. More international economic competition, technology and immigration, he added, have undercut job opportunities for many unskilled and semiskilled workers.

"This, I think, more than any other set of forces, has triggered a disorganization and lack of coherence in black communities like none that I have ever seen before . . . perhaps since slavery," he said.

"The problems will only get worse if they are not resolved through a more equitable distribution of resources," he said.

It was a memorable weekend for the Fayette County Bar and the College of Law, and we rejoice in the happy return of Dr. John Wesley Hatch to Lexington after nearly a half century with his stirring message for us all.

SPORTS LITIGATOR JOE B. CAMPBELL '68

Joe B. Campbell '68

With the University of Kentucky's national reputation in athletics, it should come as no surprise that a growing number of UK College of Law graduates are practicing in the area of sports law. Two of those graduates agreed to describe their practice for the Kentucky Lawyer.

My interest in sports law began before entering law school. I played football in college, one year at the University of Kentucky and two years at Western Kentucky University. In my senior year, I assisted two of my college teammates in negotiating professional contracts with the teams that drafted them. I enjoyed this experience much more than I did standing in a "pocket", trying to find an open receiver, while dodging huge linemen and linebackers. Consequently, I gave up my last year of athletic eligibility and entered the University of Kentucky College of Law.

After graduating from law school, I became a litigator, great training for those planning on a career in sports law. The opportunity to litigate all kinds of cases has proven extremely beneficial to my sports law practice. Anyone interested in sports law needs to be thoroughly familiar with contract law, tax law, estate planning and litigation techniques.

In 1988, my sports law career took on a whole new perspective -- the challenge of representing a coach before the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA). Dwane Casey, an assistant coach with the University of Kentucky basketball team, asked me to represent him before the NCAA. It developed into two of the most interesting and professionally rewarding experiences of my life.

First, there were the NCAA charges to defend. My good friend, law school professor and mentor, Bob Lawson, warned me at the outset that NCAA proceedings were a lawyer's nightmare. Bob, who was the UK's NCAA faculty representative, was accurate. I quickly learned that the NCAA system involved no rules of evidence, no rules or procedure, no due process, no confrontation of witnesses, and a presumption that you are guilty until you prove yourself innocent.

The UK-NCAA case was truly a challenge. Working with (and sometimes against) two of the truly great lawyers in the state, Jim Park, Jr. and Terry McBrayer, in investigating and arguing the case before the NCAA Infractions Committee was a lawyer's dream. I knew we were in trouble when we entered the hearing room and faced the Infractions Committee, three of the five members of whom were law school professors. As much as I like and admire law school professors, I would never select them to sit on one of my juries.

The second part of that scenario was just as interesting and a whole lot more financially rewarding. I sued Emery Air Freight Corporation and its security firm on behalf of Coach Casey. We made numerous tort allegations and sought monetary damages. We took more than 70 depositions in 13 states, including sworn testimony from Cawood Ledford, Billy Packer, Cliff Hagan, Eddie Sutton, Ralph Willard, Rudy Washington, James Dickey and Kevin O'Neill. A week before the trial we entered into a confidential settlement for a "substantial" sum of money. Coach Casey is currently coaching a professional team in Japan. Look for him to return to an NCAA school in the near future. The two questions I am asked most frequently are: (1) Did Coach Casey put the money in the now infamous Emery package? (The answer is no). (2) How much did Emery Air Freight pay Coach Casey to settle his case? (The answer is none of your business). It was such a fascinating experience that some day I hope to write a book about it.

Following this experience, I defended coaches at Auburn University, Mississippi State University and Middle Tennessee State University before the NCAA. I have also consulted with coaches and attorneys involved in NCAA cases at Tennessee, Alabama, Illinois and Coastal Carolina.

My coaching clients have encouraged me to become more active in representing professional athletes. I am a member of the Sports Lawyers Association and have been approved by the National Football League (NFL) to represent players. I have considered applying for approval with the National Basketball Association (NBA) and Major League Baseball (MLB). I have simply not made a decision on whether to pursue being a "sports agent". I prefer litigating cases rather than negotiating contracts.

For the time being I am content to represent coaches. I am looking for an opportunity to develop a case against the NCAA on behalf of the thousands of student athletes who are making millions of dollars for their universities and for the NCAA but who have absolutely no voice in the rules and regulations which govern their admission to college, their eligibility and their ultimate graduation. Sports lawyer? Maybe sports litigator is a better description.

Joe Bill Campbell is a partner with Campbell, Kerrick and Grise in Bowling Green and a Past President of the Kentucky Bar Association.

SPORTS AGENT DWIGHT A. WASHINGTON '75

Dwight A. Washington '75

My love for sports and the desire to help the youth in my community led me to devote time over the past several years to the Keith Byars (Miami Dolphins) and Martin Bayless (Kansas City Chiefs) free football camp in Dayton, Ohio. My involvement with professional athletes gave me the opportunity to learn about their experiences with NFL agents and their concerns with life outside of football.

With their concerns in mind and my extensive experience in labor law as a contract negotiator for both public and private sector clients, I became an NFL Agent in 1993 and formed a partnership titled "Success Beyond Sports" (SBS). SBS is a sports agency that believes that the professional athlete occupies a unique position in society and as such, has a commitment to charitable public service; off-season vocational pursuits; and post-career financial stability. Currently, SBS's clients include Martin Bayless (Kansas City Chiefs) and Santo Stephens (Cincinnati Bengals).

In addition, I am legal counsel of Dan "Big Daddy" Wilkinson of the Cincinnati Bengals. "Big Daddy" was the first college player selected in the 1994 draft. The past several months have been filled with opportunities, challenges and a heightened appreciation for the public scrutiny that professional athletes endure.

As my sports law practice continues to grow, it is my hope and desire to help professional and/or potential professional athletes to obtain success beyond sports.

Dwight A. Washington has formed his own firm, Dwight A. Washington, Co. L.P.A. in Dayton, OH.

A WOMAN'S PLACE IS ON THE BENCH

Two College of Law graduates made judicial history last fall. Jennifer B. Coffman '78 became Kentucky's first female federal judge, and Janet L. Stumbo '80 was the first woman elected to serve on the Supreme Court of Kentucky.

Judge Coffman was nominated to the bench by President Clinton in August of 1993. U.S. Senator Wendell Ford placed her name in nomination for the judgeship on the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky which was vacated by Judge Eugene Siler when he was elevated to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Since 1982 Coffman's practice has focused in the area of employment discrimination law. From 1982 until 1992 she was a partner with Brooks, Coffman & Fitzpatrick in Lexington, where in 1989 she won a $1.2 million dollar judgement in an age-discrimination suit brought by miners laid off by U.S. Steel Mining Company in Harlan. In 1992 she joined the partnership of Newberry, Hargrove & Rambicure, also in Lexington, where she practiced until she was sworn in on October 22, 1993.

"I will strive to treat each case as though it was the most important, and the only matter on the docket, because the need for efficiency in the courts should not transcend the need for public confidence," Judge Coffman said at her swearing-in ceremony at the federal courthouse in Lexington. "I will strive to decide all cases based upon the law in order to give all of us an equal playing field."

Judge Coffman is married to Wes Coffman, a Lexington dentist, and has two children.

Justice Janet Stumbo was not a newcomer to the bench when she was sworn as a Justice on the Supreme Court of Kentucky on November 19, 1993. She was elected to the Kentucky Court of Appeals in 1989. Prior to her elevation to the bench, Stumbo practiced law in her hometown of Prestonsburg.

On November 2, 1993, Stumbo was the victor in the judicial election held to fill the remaining three years of the term of retired Justice Dan Jack Combs.

U.S. District Court Judge Jennifer Coffman is helped into her judicial robes by her husband, Wes Coffman, at her swearing-in ceremony in October, 1993.

Justice Janet L. Stumbo taking her oath of office, administered by Circuit Judge William Mains of Rowan County.

She defeated interim Justice Sara Combs, a Frankfort practitioner and the widow of former Governor Bert T. Combs, who had been appointed by Governor Brereton Jones as the first woman to serve on the Supreme Court.

In December 1993, a second swearing-in ceremony was held for Justice Stumbo at the Floyd County Courthouse in Prestonsburg. The ceremony was a celebration for her many Eastern Kentucky supporters as well as for Stumbo. Floyd District Judge Danny Caudill, who served as master of ceremonies for the Prestonsburg swearing-in, said, "I think history will remember Justice Stumbo for the decisions she'll make as much as for the fact that she's the first woman elected justice."

Justice Stumbo is married to attorney Ned Pillersdorf and has three children.

CLASS ACTIONS

Charles Wylie '35 is enjoying his retirement from practice with Wylie & Sloan in Lexington. He served a term in the Kentucky House of Representatives, and was Fayette County Attorney from 1952 - 1957. He was elected Mayor of Lexington in 1968 and served until 1971.

Julian W. Knippenberg '46 continues to practice law at his offices located at 167 West Main Street, Lexington, 40507.

J. David Francis '47 has been appointed to the Council for the Future of the National Judicial College. It is the mission of the Council to provide leadership, encouragement and support to the overall resource development program of the National Judicial College.

Carl L. "Hoot" Combs '50 writes, "In 1977 I was going from Lexington, where I was practicing law, to Miami to get away from a tough winter. I stopped on Hilton Head Island to stay one night. It has stretched out to 17 years. I am now a certified tennis pro but I prefer the title certified tennis bum."

Charles R. Coy '51 of Coy, Gilbert & Gilbert in Richmond writes, "There are five lawyers in our firm now, all of whom are UK College of Law graduates."

Melvin K. Duke '51 has retired from the bench as District Judge for the 46th Judicial District (Breckinridge, Meade and Grayson Counties), where he served three four-year terms. He practiced law in Hardinsburg from 1951 until his elevation to the bench in 1978.

Thomas B. Givhan '51 with Givhan & Spainhour in Shepherdsville has decided not to retire and will continue to practice with his firm.

Robert F. Stephens '51, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Kentucky, has been named President-Elect of the Conference of Chief Justices. As part of his new position, he assumes the role of Chair of the Board of the National Senate for State Courts.

George B. Simpson '54 writes, "The Class of '54 will have its 40th reunion in the fall of 1994. I look forward to seeing my classmates at the reunion." He continues to practice law in Sturgis.

S. David Levy '56 writes, "I retired four years ago. I moved from New Jersey, where I had been in private practice as well as having been a public defender for more than 20 years and an assistant prosecutor prior to that. I now live in Boca Raton, Florida."

William E. Johnson '57 has been appointed to a one-year term as vice chair of the American Bar Association's Criminal Justice Committee. The Committee is composed of both prosecutors and defenders from across the country and concerns itself with a broad array of substantive and procedural criminal justice matters.

Albert Jones '57 has retired from practice in Paducah. He is spending his time "traveling and fishing, and in 1995 I plan to re-enter politics."

Hunter B. Whitesell '57 writes, "I am now practicing with my son, Hunter II, who graduated from the College of Law in 1990." The Whitesells are practicing in Fulton.

Charles E. English '60 has been appointed to the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary to represent the United States Sixth Circuit. He is one of 15 lawyers who represent the ABA in evaluating the professional qualifications of persons being considered for appointment to the federal courts.

Russell B. Milliken '60 is now a Professor of Timberland Accounting, Finance & Taxation in the Graduate Forest Business Management Program at the University of Georgia School of Forest Resources. He also has his own consulting firm, Milliken & Associates, consulting in timberland accounting, finance and taxation. He writes that he plans to retire to Hendersonville, North Carolina, within the next two years.

John Y. Brown, Jr. '61 was inducted into the Kentuckiana Business Hall of Fame at an awards banquet sponsored by WDRB-TV/Fox 41 and Junior Achievement.

F. Preston Farmer '62 writes, "My son, Michael P. Farmer, and my daughter, Suzanne S. Farmer, are both practicing law with me in London and Lexington."

Peter Perlman '62 was selected to speak at the Trial Advocacy Track, part of the Association

CLE

UK/CLE NEWS

By Todd B. Eberle, Associate Dean and Director of Continuing Legal Education

he 1993-94 fiscal year found UK's Office of Continuing Legal Education (UK/CLE) in its third decade of providing professional development services for lawyers after admission to the bar. The office maintains a sound financial base and with restoration of full staffing for 1994-95 we look forward to an active, productive 22nd year. Over the past decade, UK/CLE has established a core curriculum of annual biennial courses and developed a "full coverage" Kentucky legal practice publications library. That dual purpose continues as we move through the 1990's.

UK/CLE STAFF WORKS TO MEET EXPANDING NEEDS OF THE BAR

Kevin P. Bucknam, the new Assistant Director of Continuing Legal Education.

Kevin P. Bucknam recently joined the staff as Assistant Director with primary responsibility for maintenance and expansion of the office's legal publications component. Bucknam is a 1992 honors graduate of California Western School of Law in San Diego. He brings with him several years of experience in a San Diego law firm. Kevin takes over the position formerly held by Assistant Director David Miller who departed UK/CLE in 1992. Concentrating his efforts in the publications arena, Bucknam is working on the updating of handbooks and monographs as well as developing several new titles scheduled for release over the next year.

In March of this year Lori M. Coleman assumed the critical role of Editorial Assistant and Marketing Manager for the office. Coleman holds a B.A. from UK in Communications with an emphasis in advertising. Her previous work experience includes several Kentucky law firms. Staff veterans, Associate Dean Todd Eberle (8 years) and Susan Saunier (10 years) have been kept more than busy over the past year managing a full calendar of programs and publications.

CORE CURRICULUM GIVES CONTINUITY TO INSTRUCTIONAL PROGRAMS

Our annual and biennial programs have established a core curriculum of professional development courses for attorneys in all major practice areas. Five annual programs and nine programs offered every other year provide periodic instruction, substantive updates and skills training for members of the bar. There are now fourteen programs in the ongoing course curriculum.

Annual Programs:

Midwest/Midsouth Estate Planning Institute (21 years)
Mineral Law Conference (19 years)

Legal Issues for Financial Institutions Conference (15 years)
Environmental Law Institute (11 years)
National Equine Law Conference (10 years)

Biennial Programs: (every other year)

Workers' Compensation Institute (10th biennial)
Family Law Institute (10th biennial)
Midwest/Midsouth Bankruptcy Institute (7th biennial)
Midwest/Midsouth construction Law Institute (6th biennial)
Real Estate Law and Practice Institute (5th biennial)
Midwest/Midsouth Securities Law Institute (5th biennial)
Employment Law Institute (5th biennial)
Business Associations Institute (5th biennial)
Legal Ethics and Professional Responsibility Institute (3rd biennial)

PUBLICATIONS UNDERGO UPDATES AND EXPANSION

With reactivation of the "publications attorney" slot, UK/CLE plans to expand its publication services. Existing titles will be updated through supplements or new editions and several new titles will be added in the coming year. Updates are currently being developed for Kentucky Estate Administration, Workers' Compensation in Kentucky, Kentucky Health Law, Private Adoptions in Kentucky, and the Kentucky Legal Ethics Opinions and Professional Responsibility Deskbook. A new title, Limited Liability Companies In Kentucky, is being published in conjunction with a fall 1994 course on that same subject. It marks the 29th title published by UK/CLE.

As an income-based program, UK/CLE appreciates the patronage of those who have made this office of the College of Law possible through their course tuitions and publication purchases. If you have questions about upcoming courses or would like a copy of our publications catalog, please call anytime at (606) 257-2921.

RANDALL-PARK COLLOQUIUM SERIES ATTRACTS DISTINGUISHED SCHOLARS

Academicians from some of the nation's most respected law schools, as well as from other disciplines and another country, visited the College of Law in the 1993-94 academic year to participate in the Randall-Park Colloquium Series. The series, funded by Katherine Randall '73 and James Park, Jr. '58, enables the College to invite distinguished faculty members from inside and outside the University to present works in progress, which are then critiqued by the College of Law faculty.

The 1993-94 Randall-Park Colloquium Series started in September, 1993, with Professor Richard Naughton of the Department of Business Law, University of Melbourne in Melbourne, Australia. Professor Naughton, who visited the College for several weeks, presented "Recent Developments in Australian Labor Law." He was followed on October 7 by Nancy King, Assistant Professor of Law at Vanderbilt University, whose paper, "Racial Gerrymandering: Cancer or Cure?" later was published by the New York University Law Review.

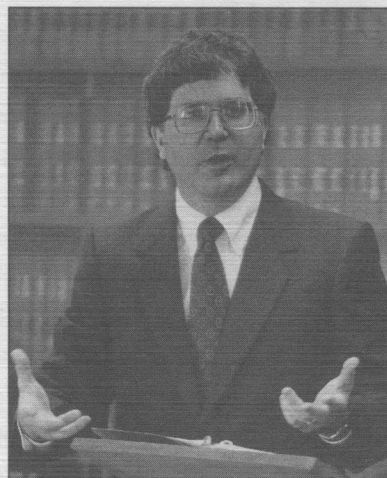

Also in October Allen Wertheimer, the McCullough Professor of Political Science at the University of Vermont, presented "Exploitation of Student Athletes." His talk was co-sponsored by the UK Department of Philosophy. In November the College of Law was honored to host Dean Guido Calabresi, then dean of Yale Law School, who delivered the Roy Ray Lecture (see article, this issue) and spoke at the Randall-Park Colloquium on "Free Speech on Campus."

Three members of the College of Law faculty presented papers this year.

Rutheford B Campbell, Professor and former dean, spoke in December, 1993, on "Corporate Fiduciary Duties." He was followed in January of this year by Assistant Professor Roberta Harding, speaking on "Prisoners' Rights to Medical Treatment in Italy and the United States." Thomas P. Lewis, former dean and William T. Lafferty Professor of Law, presented his paper on "Judicial Activism and State Constitutions" in February.

"Originalism and the Desegregation Decisions" was the title of the paper presented in March by Michael W. McConnell, William B. Graham Professor of Law at the University of Chicago Law School. The final speaker was Dean Richard G. Edwards of the UK College of Arts & Sciences, whose paper, "Rights at Work," focused on the employment-at-will doctrine and the strength of American labor unions.

John H. Garvey, Ashland Oil Professor of Law, has served as organizer of the Randall-Park Colloquium series since its inception. He left the College of Law this summer to join the faculty of the University of Notre Dame Law School (see article, this issue).

Michael W. McConnell, William B. Graham Professor of Law at the University of Chicago Law School

Nancy King, Assistant Professor of Law at Vanderbilt University.

"Organizing the Randall-Park Colloquium Series has been one of the (many) real pleasures of my life at the law school," said Professor Garvey prior to his departure. "With Kay and Jim's support we have been able each year to bring in more and better known speakers from across the country. The series has added some real depth to the intellectual life of the law school. And it allows us to send speakers back home with good reports of what a fine school UK is."

Katherine Randall '73 and James Park, Jr. '58, who endowed the Randall-Park Colloquium Series, with Dean Shipley at the College's Awards Night reception.

CALABRESI DELIVERS EIGHTH BIENNIAL RAY LECTURE

Guido Calabresi, Dean of Yale Law School from 1985 until 1994, visited the College of Law in November, 1993, to deliver the eighth biennial Roy and Virginia Ray Lecture. His lecture was held in the College of Law Courtroom on November 15, 1993, and was entitled, "Do We Own Our Own Bodies? -- An Introduction to Legal Thought: Four Approaches to Law and How They Each Determine Whether We Own Our Own Bodies."

Calabresi, who was a Rhodes Scholar and a law clerk to U.S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black, has spent over 35 years in teaching and service to the profession. He received his B.S. degree in analytical economics from Yale College, his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Oxford University, and his L.L.B. from Yale Law School. He joined the Yale Law School faculty in 1959, and for 15 years held the chair of Sterling Professor of Law.

Calabresi has authored numerous books and articles, and has delivered more than thirty lectures throughout the United States, Canada and England. His book, Ideas, Beliefs, Attitudes and the Law: Private Law Perspectives on a Public Law Problem, received the Silver Gavel Award from the American Bar Association in 1986.

While at the College of Law, Calabresi spoke to the faculty on "Free Speech on Campus" as part of the Randall-Park Colloquium Series. He was accompanied on his visit by former UK associate dean Carroll Stevens '76, who is now an associate dean at Yale Law School.

The Roy R. and Virginia F. Ray Lectureships in Law were established in 1977 by a generous endowment from Roy and Virginia Ray. The purpose of the lectureship series is to bring to the College of Law every other year a distinguished scholar for a lecture on a legal topic of current interest.

Roy Ray received an L.L.B. from the College of Law in 1928 and later received an S.J.D. from the University of Michigan Law School. He is currently Professor Emeritus at Southern Methodist University School of Law. Virginia Featherstone Ray is a 1929 graduate of the UK College of Human Environmental Sciences.

FACULTY

GORING JOINS COLLEGE OF LAW FACULTY

In June of this year Darlene C. Goring became the newest member of the College of Law faculty. She came to the College after completing her LL.M. degree at Northwestern University School of Law in Chicago.

Goring always knew she wanted to be a lawyer. "As an African-American, you become aware of how the law affects you and those around you. You learn what the law can do to you and for you. Deciding to be an attorney gave me a sense of empowerment."

Originally from Miami, Florida, Goring received a B.B.A. degree in business management from Howard University in 1983, where she was graduated magna cum laude. She was recruited to Northwestern University School of Law in Chicago, where she received her J.D. degree in 1986.

At Northwestern Goring was Note and Comment Editor for the Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology. Her article, "Fourth Amendment-Prison Cells: Is There a Right of Privacy," was published in the Journal in the fall of 1984. She also argued in the Julius C. Miner Moot Court Competition and was a member of the moot court board.

Following her graduation from law school, Goring worked as an associate in the commercial litigation department of Wilson & McIlvaine in Chicago until 1988, when she left to become associated with the Chicago office of Foley & Lardner. At Foley & Lardner, Goring worked in both the real estate and litigation practice groups. "I enjoyed having the opportunity to do both litigation and transactional work," said Goring recently. "I feel as though I had the best of both worlds in my practice."

Although she enjoyed the law firm atmosphere and met a lot of interesting people in practice, Goring decided after the first couple of years that what she liked best was teaching the younger associates. In March of 1992 she left private practice to take a position with Northwestern as interim Director of Minority Affairs, to give herself some time to consider the next step in her career. Upon completion of that position Goring entered the LL.M. program with an eye toward teaching.

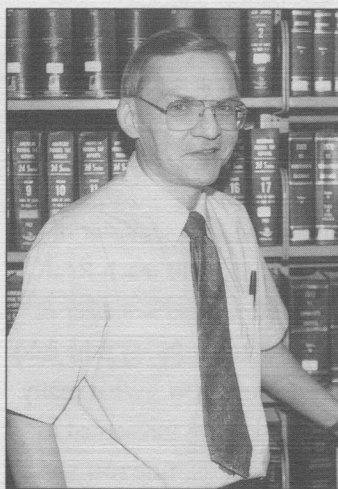

This fall Goring is teaching the first semester of Property. In the spring semester she will teach Real Estate Transactions as well as the second semester of Property. "I am looking forward to teaching," she said over the summer, "but I am nervous also. What really concerns me is that all my friends have threatened to come to my first day of class, sit on the first row and heckle me."

Goring moved to Lexington in May with her husband of two years, Richard Ross, who is a financial analyst. She enjoys music, movies and reading, particularly the books of Zora Neale Hurston, who wrote in the 1940's on African-American folklore. She also admits to being a Trekkie.

Assistant Professor Darlene Goring.

CIHAK PLANS IMPROVEMENTS FOR LAW LIBRARY

Herb Cihak, new Director of the Law Library.

Herb Cihak has ambitious plans for UK's Law Library. When former law library director Mark Linneman left in February, Dean Shipley convinced Cihak to leave the University of Mississippi Law School and join him in Lexington. In July Cihak became the new Director of the UK Law Library and Associate Professor of Law.

Cihak received his J.D. in 1983 from the University of Nebraska and his M.L.S. in 1984 from Brigham Young University. He holds two other degrees from Brigham Young: he received his B.A. there in 1972 and earned an M.A. in political science in 1975.

After receiving his M.L.S., Cihak worked as a reference librarian for the San Bernardino County Law Library in California. He then was named Associate Director of the law library for Dallas County, Texas, which he left to go to Oklahoma City University in 1986. In 1988 he moved to Oxford, Mississippi, as Public Services Librarian for the University of Mississippi Law School Library. He was promoted to Director of that library in 1991.

"I took this position because I am always looking for new challenges," Cihak said recently. "The challenge at UK is to take a law school library that has been left behind in the move to elevate the law school and bring it into the forefront. We have all the raw material that we need. The staff has done commendable work with few resources. I know that with some direction, and additional funding, we will be able to make dramatic changes in what services we can offer in a short period of time."

What also attracted Cihak to UK was the dean. "Working with Dean Shipley again is a pleasure. He made a big impact at Mississippi, and I knew that if he was putting forth the same effort at Kentucky that he did there, the law library would move ahead."

Even before his contract started in July, Cihak was at work improving the College of Law library. Over the summer he and the library staff incorporated all of the library's materials into the collection, with the appropriate call numbers, so that everything will be easily accessible. "You should be able to walk into the library and find whatever you need, without having to ask where volumes are located," said Cihak. In addition, he plans to set up a reference center near the circulation desk, which will be manned by the reference librarians during the day.

Cihak and his wife, Laurine, have enjoyed the move to Lexington. "Oxford is a delightful community," said Cihak, "but it is too small to offer the smorgasbord of activities that are available in Lexington. There is nothing we would like to do, see or participate in that we have not been able to find here. Everyone at the law school, and in our church and community, has made us feel welcome."

When he is not working, Cihak and his wife participate in church, community service and political activities. Laurine plays the viola, and has taught piano and violin lessons. The Cihaks also make time for their canine "children," Lady and Rushton. While he does not have much time to read for pleasure, Cihak did read several of John Grisham's novels before moving to Lexington. "I wanted to be able to comment on the work of my fellow Oxfordian, if asked. I confess that I enjoyed his novels much more than I had expected to."

GARVEY LEAVES UK FOR NOTRE DAME

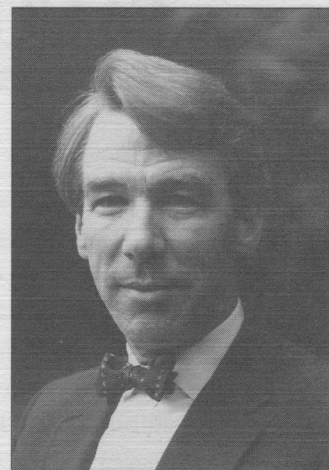

John H. Garvey, former Ashland Oil Professor of Law, left the faculty of the College of Law in July to join the faculty of the University of Notre Dame Law School. Moving to South Bend with Professor Garvey were his wife Jeanne and their five children.

A nationally-recognized expert in the area of law and religion, Garvey was considered one of the College's most outstanding scholars. He received the Robert M. and Joann K. Duncan Outstanding Teaching Award in 1993. In addition, Garvey organized speakers for the Randall-Park Colloquium series (see article, this issue).

Garvey was hired by Notre Dame to fill a newly-created position in Constitutional Law and Religion. He will be teaching the survey course in Constitutional Law, a First Amendment course, a course on Legislation, and a seminar. This fall's seminar is entitled, "Freedom."

Going to Notre Dame is something of a homecoming for Professor Garvey. He was graduated from the college at Notre Dame in 1970. His father was graduated in 1941, his brother Denis in 1972 and all of his sisters attended St. Mary's College across the road. His brother married a woman from St. Mary's and two of his sisters married Notre Dame graduates. One of Garvey's sisters lives in South Bend, and he has several cousins who work at Notre Dame.

"I can't tell you how difficult it will be for me and all my family to leave Kentucky," said Garvey before his departure. "Notre Dame is the only place in the United States I can think of persuading me to do it. I have loved the law school since the day I arrived almost twenty years ago. My best friends are among its faculty and alumni. The students are unfailingly bright, polite, and enthusiastic. As the time for our departure approaches, I feel a real sense of sadness at the uprooting that will go along with moving. Of course, we will enjoy better football, but the basketball will never be the same."

Professor John H. Garvey, who left the College of Law in July to join the faculty of the University of Notre Dame Law School.

FORMER UK LAW PROFESSOR GARRETT FLICKINGER TRADES TEACHING FOR ACTING

Former UK Professor Garrett Flickinger (center) at the Class of '67 reunion with Chris Gorman '67, Kentucky Attorney General (left), and Gene Mooney, another former member of the faculty.

W. Garrett Flickinger, who taught at the College of Law from 1963 until 1975, retired this year from the faculty of the University of New Mexico School of Law. He now is pursuing his second love, acting, while working to complete a ten-year-old project, a book on fiduciary administration.

While at the College of Law, Professor Flickinger, or "Flick" as he is still called, taught in the area of Trusts and Estates. He served as UK's Academic Ombudsman for the 1970-1971 academic year, and as Chair of the University Senate Council in 1992. During his tenure at UK, Professor Flickinger became active with the Law School Admissions Council, where he met Professor Frederick Hart of the University of New Mexico, who was dean at that time. Hart encouraged him to join the faculty at the University of New Mexico in 1975 when his sinusitis made it impossible for Professor Flickinger to remain in Kentucky. He has taught at New Mexico for the past 19 years.

Throughout his teaching career, Professor Flickinger remained active in local theatre, performing in summer stock, particularly in musical comedies. He has appeared in television commercials and most recently in the Warner Brothers film, "Wyatt Earp." Presently he is active with the Albuquerque Civic Light Opera Association. Flickinger last visited the UK College of Law in 1992, for the 25th reunion of the Class of '67.

"Flick certainly was one of the most beloved members of the faculty from my student days," said Professor Rutheford B Campbell. "We all appreciated his exceptionally keen mind, his wonderful sense of humor and his unflagging devotion to his students."

FACULTY NEWS

Richard C. Ausness, Ashland Oil Professor of Law, wrote an article on "Tort Liability for Asbestos Removal Costs" which was published this summer in 73 Oregon Law Review No. 2 (1994). He also was published as part of a symposium on "Costs and Concerns in Environmental Regulation and Litigation" in 70 Denver University Law Review 437 (1993).

Drusilla V. Bakert, Associate Dean, was elected in April as the Southeast region's representative to the Board of Directors of the National Association for Law Placement (NALP). Her article, "Writing Non-Discriminatory Job Descriptions and Advertisements," was published as the cover article in NALP's March 1994 Bulletin, and was reprinted in the May 16, 1994, issue of CPC Spotlight, the magazine of the College Placement Council. Her article will appear also as part of the Project Path Resource Manual for Illinois employers being published by an Illinois college on a grant funded by the U.S. Department of Education. The manual is part of an effort to facilitate the employment of disabled persons.

Carolyn S. Bratt, W.L. Matthews Professor of Law, was appointed in April by Kentucky Secretary of State Bob Babbage to the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance. She is serving also as Director of the College of Law's Mineral Law Center. Her article, "A Primer on Kentucky Intestacy Law," was published at 82 KLJ 29, and for that article she received the Lowell T. Hughes Award for legal scholarship. Professor Bratt has secured a grant from the Robert L. Gale Fund of the Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges to study "Issues of Gender in the Composition of College and University Governing Boards." She will be co-principal investigator with Drs. Susan J. Scollay and Ann Tickamyer, both faculty members at UK. In addition, Professor Bratt was appointed to the Curriculum and Research Committee of the Association of American Law Schools and to the Environmental Law Committee of the American College of Trust and Estate Counsel.

Mary J. Davis, Assistant Professor of Law, has completed her second article, "Individual and Institutional Responsibility: A Vision for Comparative Fault," which is currently under review for publication at several law journals. In addition, Professor Davis' first article, "Design Defect Liability: In Search of a Standard of Responsibility," 30 Wayne L. Rev. 1217 (1993) has been selected for republication in Defense Law Journal (1994). Professor Davis currently is working on two articles, one analyzing recent Supreme Court cases related to products liability and the other a retrospective on the Consumer Product Safety Act. Professor Davis presented a summary of developments in Kentucky products liability law at the UK/CLE Products Liability seminar in October 1993. In 1993-94 she coached the Trial Advocacy Board's National Trial Competition team and Association of Trial Lawyers of America competition teams.

Todd B. Eberle, Associate Dean and Director of Continuing Legal Education, concluded his term as President of the international Association of Continuing Legal Education Administrators (ACLEA) at their 30th annual meeting in New Orleans this year. He remains active in the organization as chair of its nominating committee and as a member of the long-range planning committee. Eberle also continues to serve on the Executive Committee of the American Association of Law Schools' section on Continuing Legal Education. Last fall he and Professor Rick Underwood published Kentucky Legal Ethics Opinions and Professional Responsibility Deskbook as managing editor and general editor, respectively. Eberle also continues as editor of Continuing Legal Education: The Handbook of the CLE Profession, Fourth Edition. He recently was reappointed to the boards of directors of Central Kentucky Legal Services and the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund.

Professor Bill Fortune at a recent alumni event.

William H. Fortune, Edward T. Breathitt Professor of Law, made presentations to the Federal Bar Association on legal ethics in January and March of 1994. He presided over a mock trial for the College of Nursing in March. Fortune is co-author of "Psychology and the Legal System" (1994) with Professor Larry Wrightsman of the University of Kansas and Professor Mike Nietzel, chair of UK's Psychology Department. The 1993 Supplement to Professor Fortune's Trial Ethics (co-authored by Professor Underwood) is now available. He is continuing work with Professor Lawson on a Kentucky criminal law book, scheduled for completion in 1995.

Eugene R. Gaetke, Wendell Cherry Professor of Law, was appointed by Dean Shipley to serve as Associate Dean for Academic Affairs, beginning in July 1994. He currently is developing materials for a casebook on professional responsibility. Professor Gaetke also recently gave a series of two-hour lectures entitled "Legal Ethics Update" for the Fayette County Bar Association's Continuing Legal Education program.

John H. Garvey, formerly Ashland Oil Professor of Law, recently published a third edition of Modern Constitutional Theory (Garvey & Aleinikoff, West Publishing, 3rd ed. 1994). Three shorter pieces by Professor Garvey also were published in the past year: "Black and White Images," 56 Law & Contemp. Probs. 189 (1993); "Private Power and the Constitution," 10 Const. Commentary 311 (1993); and "The Pope's Submarine," 30 San Diego L. Rev. 849 (1994). In addition, his piece "Men Only" appeared as a chapter in Gerald Dworkin's book, The En- forcement of Morality by the Law (1994 Westview Press). His article "Freedom and Representation" was published as a chapter in a collection entitled Kindred Matters (1993, Cornell University Press). Over the past year Professor Garvey presented papers on these themes for the Association of American Law Schools (Constitutional Law Section and Jewish Law Section), the American Society of International Law, and the law faculties of Case Western Reserve University, the University of Notre Dame, Boston University and the University of San Diego. In July he joined the faculty of the University of Notre Dame Law School (see article, this issue).

Alvin L. Goldman, Dorothy Salmon Professor of Law, soon will complete his term as Chair of the Labor Law Group Trust. In this capacity he recently helped provide editorial guidance for Cooper & Nolan, Labor Arbitration, a new casebook scheduled for July publication by West. He is engaged in similar editorial advice for a revision of Rabin, Silverstein & Schatzki, Labor and Employment Law, which will be published by West next year. In September of 1993, Professor Goldman was in Brussels attending a regional conference of the International Society for Labor Law, where he represented the United States branch as an alternative delegate to the Society's governing assembly. He continues to prepare annual contributions as U.S. co-reporter for International Labour Law Reports and in March was a panelist on a program in Chicago co-sponsored by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. With the help of his daughter Paula, he recently revised his chapter in the treatise, Labor and Employment Arbitration, which is published by Matthew Bender. He and his colleagues are completing their revision of the West casebook, Finkin, Goldman & Summers, Legal Protection for the Individual Employee, and he continues revision work on his treatise, Labor Law and Industrial Relations in the U.S.A.

Louise Graham, Willburt Ham Professor of Law, continues her work with a Program Evaluation Grant to assist in the implementation of the Jefferson Family Court. In addition, Professor Graham has served as a consultant to the Kansas City, Missouri, Family Courts. In January she gave a presentation, "Considering the Effect of the Court Process on Families--Guidelines for Structuring a Family Court," to the judges of the Kansas City Family Court. Professor Graham has served on the Children's Justice Task Force for the Kentucky Cabinet for Human Resources. She has continued work on a manual related to visitation and will be publishing the 1994 update to Kentucky Domestic Relations (with Judge James E. Keller) this fall.

Roberta M. Harding, Assistant Professor of Law, had an article, "Waiver: A Consequence of the Inadvertent Production of Documents Protected by the Attorney-Client Privilege," published in Catholic University's Law Review. The National Law Journal selected this article to be included on its "Worth Reading" list. Her second article, "Show and Tell: An Analysis of the Scope of the Attorney-Client Waiver Standards" will be published in December by the University of Texas' Review of Litigation. She now is working on her third article, which addresses the unconstitutionality of forcibly medicating condemned inmates solely for the purpose of execution. Professor Harding was invited to make a presentation at UK's Carter G. Woodson Lecture Series on "Institutional Racism and the Death Penalty: From Charging to Imposition of the Death Sentence." At the request of the Department of Public Advocacy, Professor Harding made a presentation to inmates enrolled in Legal Aid Training on 42 U.S.C. section 1983 actions. Professor Harding was asked by the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment of Punishment to be a member of a future delegation that will examine a foreign prison. She is assisting the members of the Association of Black Law Students in preparing a directory of the College of Law's minority graduates. In addition, she was instrumental in the Student Public Interest Law Foundation's obtaining more than $15,000 to finance its student summer fellowship program.

Michael P. Healy, Associate Professor of Law, is preparing a report for the Administrative Conference of the United States that analyzes the fairness and effectiveness of the judicial review preclusion provision of the Superfund statute. He also is working on an article that addresses state Clean Water Act certification of hydro-power projects licensed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. During the Spring 1994 semester, Professor Healy taught the law component of the University's graduate school course on environmental systems. His family now includes Benjamin Garver Healy, who was born at the end of the Spring semester.

Carolyn M. Kennedy, Associate Dean, was one of six panelists at two presentations on the topic of "Alternative Recruitment Strategies" at the Law School Admission Council's Annual Meeting and Education Conference in Scottsdale, AZ on June 3 and 4. She focused her presentation on the work of UK's Recruitment Committee, student volunteers and supportive alumni.

Robert G. Lawson, W.L. Matthews, Jr. Professor of Law, received the Robert M. and Joanne K. Duncan Outstanding Teaching Award for 1994. He is continuing work with Professor Fortune on a Kentucky criminal law book, scheduled for completion in late 1995. He is working also on a 1994 supplement to his book on Kentucky evidence law. This spring Professor Lawson made a presentation on scientific evidence to the Kentucky Academy of Trial Attorneys at a seminar in Covington. He acted as moderator of a program on the same subject at the KBA annual convention in June. He is scheduled to serve as a lecturer in a series of seminars on trial practice, to be presented at four Kentucky locations by UK/CLE in the fall.

Thomas P. Lewis, William T. Lafferty Professor of Law, submitted an opinion piece on "Judicial Activism" to the University of Louisville alumni magazine, the Brandeis Brief, at their invitation. Pursuing his interest in Kentucky constitutional law, Professor Lewis continues to conduct a seminar on that subject with Chief Justice Robert Stephens '51, and has two research projects underway.

FACULTY NEWS

Martin J. McMahon, Laramie L. Leatherman Professor of Law, recently published a casebook, Federal Income Taxation, Cases and Materials (Foundation Press), co-authored with Professors Paul McDaniel of N.Y.U. Law School, Hugh Ault of Boston College Law School, and Daniel Simmons of the University of California at Davis Law School. Also this year, supplements are being published to three of his other books, Federal Income Taxation of Business Organizations (Foundation Press 1991), Federal Income Taxation of Partnerships and S Corporations (Foundation Press 1991), both co-authored with McDaniel, Ault and Simmons, and Federal Income Taxation of Individuals (Warren, Gorham & Lamont 1988), co-authored with Professor Boris I. Bittker of Yale Law School. Professor McMahon currently is working on a second edition of Federal Income Taxation of Individuals, which will be published next year. At the American Bar Association Tax Section 1994 Midyear Meeting in Houston, Professor McMahon gave a CLE presentation on "Recent Cases and Revenue Rulings on Realization and Recognition of Income, Allowable Deductions, Tax Accounting and Procedure." He continues to serve on three committees of the ABA Section on Taxation: the Teaching Taxation Committee; the Partnerships Committee; and the Problems of Low Income Taxpayers Committee. He also is a member of the Executive Committee of the Tax Section of the Association of American Law Schools, the Board of Editors of the Florida Tax Review and the Membership Committee of the American College of Tax Counsel.

Douglas C. Michael, Associate Professor of Law, completed a research report for the Administrative Conference of the United States entitled "Federal Agency Use of Audited Self-Regulation as a Regulatory Technique." Recommendations based on that report will be submitted to the Conference's plenary session this summer, and the manuscript currently is in circulation to law reviews for publication. Professor Michael was invited to conduct an afternoon-long seminar on audited self-regulation for staff members of the Food and Drug Administration in Washington, D.C., in March. He received a second research contract from the Conference to study self-reporting and other innovative compliance techniques, on which he currently is working. He also is continuing as faculty advisor to the Kentucky Law Journal and is a director of the Kentucky Law Journal Association, Inc., the association for Journal alumni and friends.

John M. Rogers, Brown, Todd & Heyburn Professor of Law, has completed three years of service as Associate Dean for Academic Affairs. In 1994 he was awarded a Fulbright lectureship grant to teach international and constitutional law at Zhongshan (Sun Yat-Sen) University in Guangzhou (Canton), China, during the 1994-95 academic year. He will be on sabbatical leave for the year, and will return to UK in the summer of 1995. His essay, "A Way to Think About International Law," recently appeared in Essays in Honour of Wang TieYa, edited by R. St.J. Macdonald and published in London, England.

Robert G. Schwemm, Wendell H. Ford Professor of Law, published an article entitled "The Future of Fair Housing Litigation" in the Summer 1993 volume of the John Marshall Law Review. Also last year, the 1993 Supplement to his book, Housing Discrimination: Law and Litigation (Clark Boardman Calaghan) was published. Last October, Professor Schwemm conducted a half-day training session in Washington, D.C. on enforcement of the federal mortgage lending discrimination laws for about 50 staff lawyers with the Office of Thrift Supervision. He also was the moderator and one of the speakers for a panel discussion on recent developments in fair housing law at a November, 1993, retreat of the Housing and Civil Enforcement Section of the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Justice Department.

David E. Shipley, Dean of the College of Law and Professor of Law, published a short article titled "Fourteen Tough Copyright Questions" at 58 Mississippi Libraries 16 (Spring 1994) for the Mississippi Libraries Association. He made a CLE presentation to the Fayette County Bar Association on "Copyright Law for the General Practitioner," and he delivered a talk and led a discussion of "Copyright Issues in the Digital Age: Access vs. Intellectual Property Rights" at a program sponsored by the Central and Eastern Kentucky Online Users Group and the Kentucky Chapter of the Special Libraries Association. Dean Shipley also was chair of the joint ABA/AALS sabbatical accreditation site inspection of the University of Oklahoma College of Law.

Professor Tom Stipanowich teaching the Uniform Commercial Code.

Thomas J. Stipanowich, Alumni Professor of Law, recently saw the publication of the five-volume treatise entitled Federal Arbitration Law: Agreements, Awards, and Remedies under the Federal Arbitration Act for Little, Brown & Co. which he co-authored with Northwestern law professors Ian Macneil and Richard Speidel. He is currently at work on the second supplement to the treatise, and in the early stages of another work dealing with dispute avoidance and resolution in the construction industry. Other research and writing projects include an article entitled "Toward a Dynamic, Holistic Approach to Dispute Management," and an essay on codification of construction law for an international book dedicated to former Berkeley professor Justin Sweet. Stipanowich is spearheading an international survey on construction industry ADR (co-sponsored by numerous organizations in the U.S., Canada, Europe, and Australia) and co-chairing an international conference on the subject which will be held in Lexington October 16-19, 1994. He was luncheon speaker for the Tenth Annual Meeting of the American Bar Association Forum on the Construction Industry in Charleston, South Carolina on April 8, and will be chairing a panel at the international Society for Professionals in Dispute Resolution (SPIDR) conference in Dallas this fall. Stipanowich recently was appointed to the steering committee of the construction industry Dispute Avoidance and Resolution Task Force (DART), made a member of the national Building Futures Council, and a consultant to the Baltimore Building Congress. Locally, Stipanowich is co-chair of the Kentucky Bar Association Alternative Dispute Resolution Committee, and is helping to facilitate an architectural design charrette for McConnell Springs in July. He recently stepped down as chair of the board of the Mediation Center of Kentucky, Inc.

Richard H. Underwood, Spears-Gilbert Professor of Law, has completed an article styled "Logic and the Common Law Trial," which he hopes will reappear as an appendix to a book in progress titled False Witness: The Law and Lore of Perjury and Other Forensic Misconduct. Professor Underwood also is working on a second edition of his book Trial Ethics (Little, Brown & Co.) this time with an added co-author, Edward Imwinkelreid, as well as Professor Bill Fortune. In addition, he is at work on a 1994 Supplement to the earlier edition. He continues to serve as Chair of the KBA Ethics and Unauthorized Practice Committees, and gave CLE presentations for the KBA and KATA over the summer. Professor Underwood, who also teaches a course on Law and Medicine, participated in two presentations sponsored by the UK Medical Center—one on the legal implications of the "Human Genome Project" and the other on "Health Care Rationing." He is preparing an article on the former subject.

Sarah N. Welling, Alumni Professor of Law, and three co-authors signed a book contract in January with West Publishing to write a multi-volume treatise on federal criminal law. The manuscript is due in December, 1995. Also in January her article, "Smurfs, Money Laundering and the Federal Criminal Law: The Crime of Structuring Transactions" was cited by the U.S. Supreme Court in Ratzlaf v. U.S., ___ U.S. ___, 54 Crim. L. Rev. 2047, 2056 n. 14 (Blackmun, Rehnquist, O'Connor & Thomas dissenting). In March she was appointed to the Bank Secrecy Act Advisory Group, a Treasury Department panel of 30 members from the private sector and law enforcement which meets quarterly to give Treasury advice on strengthening the anti-money laundering program. Professor Welling also was appointed to the Advisory Panel on Money Laundering and Artificial Intelligence to the Office of Technology Assessment of the United States Congress, which is studying the feasibility of using artificial intelligence programs to detect money laundering in wire transfers. She spoke in May at the Second Annual International Money Laundering Conference in Miami, Florida, on the topic of "The Bank Secrecy Act and Money Laundering Laws--New Requirements since the Annunzio-Wylie Law." In December she will travel to Hong Kong to speak at the Conference of the Society for the Reform of Criminal Law on the topic, "Holding Corporate Officers Liable for Money Laundering Based on Willful Blindness."

Frederick W. Whiteside, Professor of Law Emeritus, continues his part-time practice in the areas of elder law and wills and estates. His KBA service includes editing and assisting in the distribution of 46,000 copies of the Third Edition of "Laws and Programs for Older Kentuckians," and he is the College of Law representative on the Board of the Kentucky Bar Foundation (grants subcommittee). He is also on the Board of Bluegrass Community Services and a "Special Science Research Associate Emeritus" with UK's Sanders-Brown Center on Aging.

COLLEGE OF LAW HOLDS COMMENCEMENT FOR CLASS OF 1994

The College of Law held Commencement ceremonies for the Class of 1994 on Derby Day, Saturday, May 7, 1994, in the filled Concert Hall of the Singletary Center for the Arts in Lexington, with Dean David Shipley presiding for the first time.

On the preceding evening, the dean and faculty hosted the traditional reception for the graduates and their families at Spindletop Hall. Despite a wet lawn, approximately 500 people enjoyed the occasion in the Oak Room, Library and Music Room and on the porch overlooking the grounds of Spindletop.

At 10 o'clock the next morning, the processional of the College's 85th graduation began to enter the Concert Hall and proceed across the stage before being seated for the traditional program of three speakers, each representing a facet of the profession.

Representing the 1994 graduates was a Columbia, Kentucky native, Steve Loy, who tied with Michele Meyer McCarthy for the honor of finishing first in the class with the highest grade point average. Steve's remarks to his classmates were enjoyed by all and are shared with you in a separate article in this issue.

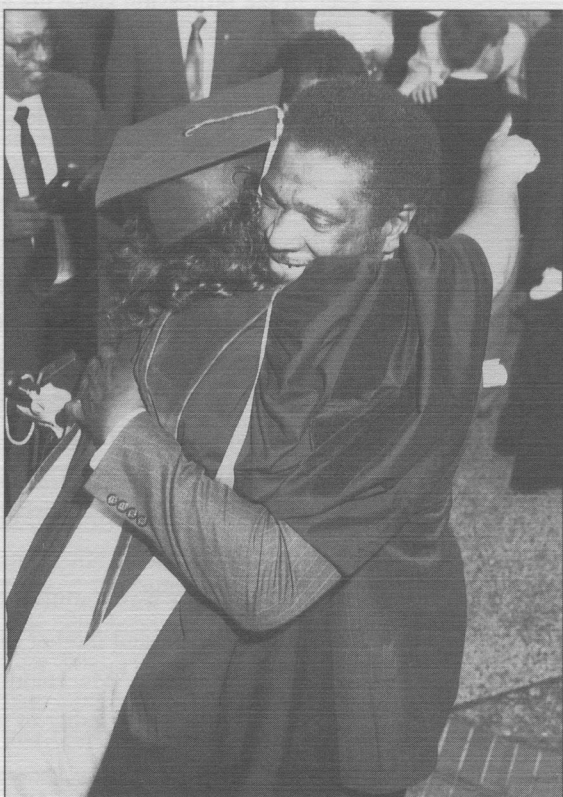

Chosen by the graduates to address them on behalf of the faculty was past dean and now full time faculty, Professor Bob Lawson '63, who described changes he has seen in the profession since his graduation from UK Law.

On behalf of the bar, this year's President of the Kentucky Bar Association, John Prather, Jr. '70 addressed the packed hall. He gave both advice in a "top ten" format and reasons that they can and should be proud of being a lawyer nowadays.

Two honors were conferred prior to presentation of degrees. The only honor to be conferred on a sole student was the sterling silver Faculty Cup, which is awarded to the graduate who made the most contributions to the environment of the College as a whole. Selected by secret ballot of the faculty and the recipient's identity unknown to all but the dean until the moment of the announcement, the winner of the Faculty Cup this year was Kathleen McClary Haddix, an outstanding student and mother of four young children, of Paris, Kentucky. Ms. Haddix moved with her family to Louisville this summer to work for Brown, Todd & Heyburn.

Dean Shipley presenting the Faculty Cup to Kathleen M. Haddix '94.

The following graduates stood to be recognized as eligible for election to the Order of the Coif after the spring grades are finalized and the top 10% officially designated:

Caroline E. Boeh, Paducah
Susan S. Chappell, Seneca, SC
Michael S. Colvin, Louisville
Robert G. Friedman, Lexington
Kathleen M. Haddix, Paris
Kim M. Jackson, Lexington
Theresa A. Kleine-Kracht, Louisville
Steven B. Loy, Columbia
Bryan K. Mattingly, Springfield
Michele M. McCarthy, Louisville
Donald E. Meyer, Louisville
Christopher D. Miller, Lexington
Russell B. Morgan, Bowling Green
Amanda L. Pope, Gallipolis, OH
Brett H. Todd, Louisville
Richard B. Warne, Wheaton, IL
Barry Todd Wetzel, Lexington
David S. Wisz, Delray Beach, FL
James C. Woolery, Ashland
Carolyn C. Zerga, Lexington

After the recessional, the law faculty and new graduates gathered outside and the rain held off until group pictures were taken by professional photographers and proud families on the steps of the Center.

GRADUATION REMARKS BY STEVEN B. LOY '94

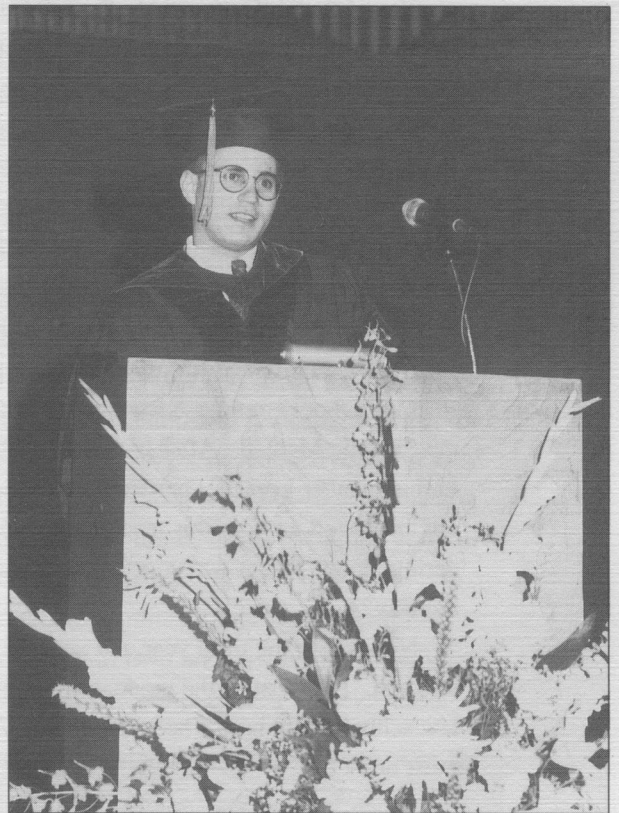

In law school when you are not prepared for class or, for some reason, you simply do not want to answer a question, you take what is called a "pass". However, if you pass too many times in a semester a professor can dock your grade for lack of participation.

When I was asked to come up with a few words to say today, I really thought about walking up to the podium and saying "I pass", especially considering how many people are in attendance. I thought it would be the one time in my law school career that I could refuse to speak and a professor could not do a thing about it. But, then I remembered that I am in Dean Rogers' class this semester and grades aren't out yet. I was afraid Dean Rogers would find some way to withhold my diploma because of lack of participation. So, I will attempt to say a few brief words.

First of all, on behalf of the graduates of the College of Law I would like to extend a sincere note of appreciation to all our families and friends for attending today's ceremonies. Likewise, I would like to thank our families and friends for all the support--both financial and emotional--that they have given us over the past three years. We also would like to express our gratitude to the faculty and staff of the College of Law for allowing us an opportunity to acquire a legal education.

The past three years certainly have been difficult but they have also been three of the best years in our lives. We really have learned a lot. For example, I think we all now know that Roe v. Wade is not about two guys crossing a river in a canoe.

There is an old saying that states that in the first year of law school they scare you to death, the second year they work you to death and the third year they bore you to death. After Professor Bratt's first eight o'clock class I think we all understood exactly what they meant by scaring us to death. Professor Bratt actually promised to physically remove us from class if we tried to come in the classroom after the bell had rung. And eight o'clock comes awfully early.

Steven B. Loy '94, who tied for first in his class with Michelle Meyer McCarthy '94, delivering his remarks at commencement.

Also in the first year we began to learn the little rules of thumb for getting through law school. For instance, from Professor Garvey, we learned never to volunteer in class. We learned the unique logic of law school that you don't ask a professor a question to which you don't already know the answer, because they will inevitably turn right around and ask you, "Well, what do you think the answer is?" We, or at least one of the graduates, learned that it is not a good idea to cite Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones as binding legal authority. And we learned that legal terminology makes absolutely no sense--a memo is never short enough to fit on a post-it pad, a brief is anything but brief, and a cert. is not a breath mint.

The second year is the year they work you to death. Also in the second year we added to our list of rules of thumb for survival. First, from Professor Vasek, we learned never to make eye contact with a professor in class if you do not want to be called on. Second, courtesy of Mason Moore and Caroline Boeh, two of today's graduates, we learned that the crossword puzzle in the "Kentucky Kernel", if folded correctly, would fit perfectly in between the pages of our casebooks. In this way, one could look completely interested in anything a professor had to say yet remain entertained for an entire class period.

Law school employs a teaching technique called the Socratic Method. After two years of being taught in this manner I recall a particular student, who was obviously fed up with this teaching technique, wondering aloud, "What was so great about Socrates anyway?"

Now, on to the third year, the year they bore you to death. For most of the graduates the third year of law school really hasn't been bad at all. After all, most of us haven't been in the law school building that much. I won't mention any names, but I have been asked if a particular student even came back to Lexington after his summer in New York.

In the third year, most students are no longer intimidated. Mason and Caroline don't even bother to hide their puzzles anymore. They work on them right out in the open.

What I have discussed so far deals with the past. However, today we are taking part in a rite of passage that will push us into the future.

Earlier I spoke jokingly of "passing." However, we as graduates should never again want to "pass." I would hope that as attorneys we would never "pass" on accepting a client in need--a client who may not be able to pay us a lot of money, who may not bring us a lot of recognition, or who may not further our career.

I would hope that we would never "pass" on attempting to improve the system. To make it more accessible, to make it more just, and to make it more understandable.

I would hope what we would never "pass" on standing up for justice. To strive to achieve just results, to treat our clients justly, and to do justice to the law itself.

Finally, I would hope that we would never "pass" on being honest, ethical, and trustworthy. Never "pass" on making the practice of law more than a business but of making it a noble cause.

The last thing I want to say is to wish the graduating class a very successful future and to wish all the mother's out there a Happy Mother's Day Weekend--Happy Mother's Day Mom.

TWO UK STUDENTS RECEIVE KBA AWARDS

Two of the three students who placed in the 1994 Kentucky Bar Association's Student Writing Competition were from the College of Law.

Charles R. Baesler, Jr. '94 of Frankfort won second prize for his paper, "Alienage Discrimination in Housing." Stacey Johnson Hughes '94 of Glasgow won third prize for her paper, "Homeless in America: Is Their Time Running Out?"

The winner of this year's competition was a student from Chase College of Law, Northern Kentucky University.

UK SBA ONE OF NATION'S TOP THREE

The Student Bar Association of the College of Law has been notified by the American Bar Association that they have been selected as one of the top three student bar associations in the United States. Whether UK's SBA chapter has been named "SBA of the Year," or placed second or third, will be announced at the ABA's annual convention to be held after this magazine goes to press.

"We are thrilled to be one of the top three, whether it is first, second or third," said Clay M. Stephens '95, President of the Student Bar Association. Stephens will attend the ABA meeting on behalf of UK's SBA chapter to accept the award.

Among the community projects listed by the SBA in their application for this award are the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program, the ABA Work a Day at the Lexington Humane Society, a Warm Clothing Drive for the homeless and Race Judicata, the proceeds from which are used for community projects. Among the SBA's student activities for 1993-94 were a Halloween Party, the Barristers' Ball, the Libel Show, a faculty-student lunch, a snow skiing trip to Paoli Peaks and the Cardozo Open golf tournament. Also this year the SBA published a weekly newspaper of information and events.

"Our Student Bar Association fully deserves this recognition," said Dean David E. Shipley. "They have worked very hard over the past year, both on activities for the students and public service events for the community. We are very proud of their achievements."

CAREER SERVICES REPORT

By Drusilla V. Bakert, Associate Dean

Employers and law schools nationwide are beginning to report a upturn in the legal job market for the first time since 1988. However, the job market in Kentucky probably will improve at a slower rate than the markets in other states, because the downturn started here a year or more later than it did elsewhere. The upturn will be especially good news for the 1995 graduating class.

Despite the sluggish job market in 1993, UK graduates fared relatively well, finding employment at a rate significantly above the national average. 83.5% of the 1993 law graduates nationwide who reported on their employment status had found employment within 6 months after graduation. The figure for UK graduates was 88% including those who did not pass the Kentucky bar exam, and 92% excluding those graduates. All but one of those who flunked the bar in July 1993 passed on retaking the bar in February 1994, and most have found employment since the survey was taken.

In 1994 as in 1993 fewer students than in past years were employed at graduation: slightly more than one-half of the class were still looking in May 1994. This is due in part to the fact that employers are waiting to hire until the new graduates can start work, rather than recruiting before graduation, to be certain that the work is there. For example, the week after graduation we received more than a dozen new job listings. A much higher percentage of 1994 graduates will be employed by the time this report is published.

Of the members of the Class of 1994 who reported employment at graduation, an overwhelming number, 72%, are going into private practice. 17% are taking judicial clerkships, 5% are going into government and military positions and 6% are going into other employment or have decided to pursue advanced degrees. The percentage going into private practice is much higher than was reported by the 1993 class at graduation (63%), indicating perhaps the beginning of a market upswing, because for many graduates private practice is their first choice.

Two new graduates are clerking for judges on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit this year.

Theresa Kleine-Kracht is clerking for Judge Eugene Siler in London, and Greg Taylor is clerking for Judge Boyce F. Martin, Jr. in Louisville. Four members of the class of 1993 are clerking for federal district court judges or federal magistrates for the Eastern District of Kentucky, all of whom are College of Law alumni: Amy Sullivan is clerking for Judge Henry Wilhoit '60; Angela Logan is clerking for Judge Jennifer B. Coffman '78; Sara Moore is clerking for Judge Karl Forester '66; and Lisa Gracia is clerking for Magistrate Judge Peggy Patterson '76.

At the state court level, Bridget Papalia is clerking for Chief Justice Robert F. Stephens '51 of the Supreme Court of Kentucky, and Michael K. Smith is clerking for Justice Thomas Spain '51. Other 1994 graduates are clerking for Kentucky Court of Appeals and Circuit Court judges across the Commonwealth.

In February UK and the other member schools of the Mid-South Law Placement Consortium sponsored a day-long seminar for students and alumni interested in exploring careers outside the traditional practice of law. The program was entitled "What Do You Want to Do With Your Law Degree?" and was presented by Deborah Arron, a UCLA law graduate and nationally-known author in the field of legal career changes. Over 120 alumni and students of the sponsoring schools attended, and the program received rave reviews. The Mid-South group plans to put together similar programs in the future, so if there are topics of particular interest to you, please contact me at the address listed below.

The Career Services Office keeps on file information regarding a variety of legal and nonlegal positions for use by students and alumni. Each summer we survey law firms across the state, as well as government agencies and public interest organizations. If you were not contacted, but would like to be on file with our office so that interested students or graduates can contact you about employment opportunities, please call or write Associate Dean Drusilla Bakert, 261 Law Building, University of Kentucky, Lexington, KY 40506-0048 (phone 606-257-8320).

UK COLLEGE OF LAW HONORS 52 STUDENTS AT AWARDS NIGHT

On Thursday evening, April 21, the College of Law held its annual Awards Night ceremony, co-sponsored by Greenebaum Doll & McDonald. The ceremony was dedicated to the memory of Laramie L. Leatherman '53, who played a substantial role in the institution of Awards Night.

Fifty-two incoming and current students were recognized. The College announced over $100,000 in scholarships and awards for students, faculty and staff. The following awards were presented at the ceremony:

Greenebaum Doll & McDonald Awards for Academic Excellence: Tuition scholarships funded by Greenebaum Doll & McDonald are given to the students who place first in their respective classes at the end of the fall semester. Phillip D. Scott, UK Law '67, presented the Greenebaum Awards to Melanie Kilpatrick of Corbin for the first-year class and Medrith Lee Hager of Ft. Wright for the second-year class.

Sturgill, Turner & Truitt - Roy Moreland Scholarship: Dean Shipley along with partners Gardner L. Turner '54 and Stephen L. Barker '75 announced the enhancement of the Roy Moreland Scholarship by a generous gift from Sturgill, Turner & Truitt. The Sturgill, Turner & Truitt - Roy Moreland Scholarship is now the largest general scholarship awarded to a second or third year student.

Stoll, Keenon & Park Scholarship for Outstanding Writing for the Kentucky Law Journal: Presented by Dan M. Rose '84 to second-year student Julie O'Daniel McClellan of Bardstown for her note, "Apportioning Liability to Nonparties in Kentucky Tort Actions: A Natural Extension of Comparative Fault or a Phantom Scapegoat for Negligent Defendants?" which was published in KLJ's Volume 82, Number 3.

Stoll, Keenon & Park Scholarship for Outstanding Service to the Kentucky Law Journal: Presented by Dan Rose to upcoming KLJ Editor-in-Chief Rebecca A. Hannifan of Hardin.

Colvin P. Rouse Award: Presented to R. Campbell Connell '94 of Paris for outstanding writing for the Kentucky Law Journal. Mr. Connell's note, "Howling Co. v. Nationwide Corp.: The Sixth Circuit Provides the 'Solution' to Virginia Bankshares' Causation Query," was published in KLJ Volume 82, Number 1.

Lowell T. Hughes Award: Presented to Carolyn S. Bratt, W.L. Matthews Professor of Law, for outstanding writing for the KLJ. Her article, "A Primer on Kentucky Intestate Laws," was published in KLJ Volume 82, Number 1.

National Moot Court Team Scholarships: Four scholarships were awarded to each member of the National Moot Court Team for the 1994-95 school year. John W. Phillips '81 presented the Boehl Stophor & Graves Moot Court Scholarship to Jeffrey S. Smith of Bardstown. The Landrum & Shouse Moot Court Scholarship was presented by Thomas M. Cooper '74 to Eric Lycan of Greenup. Erik Goes '95 of Lexington received the Savage, Garmer & Elliott Moot Court Scholarship. Dan Rose presented the Stoll, Keenon & Park Moot Court Scholarship to Diane Rose of Winston-Salem, NC.

Massey Foundation Scholarships: Professor Carolyn Bratt has served this year as Acting Director of the Mineral Law Center. She announced the Massey Foundation Scholarships, awarded to the upcoming editors of the Journal of Natural Resources and Environmental Law, as follows:

Milton Toby of Campbellsville, Editor in Chief
 Andrew Park of Lexington, Executive Editor
 Chris Daniel of Lexington, Articles Editor
 Neil Fairweather of Lexington, Comments Editor
 Jeff Stein of Louisville, Notes Editor
 Amanda Young of Cookeville, TN, Technical Editor
 Grant Stephens of Ashland, Production Editor.

UK Trial Advocacy Board Awards: UK's student team that competes at the trial level was recognized at Awards Night and received plaques sponsored by Brown, Todd & Heyburn. James Park, Jr. '58, made the presentations to Board members Yavon Griffin of Lexington, Janie McGrath of Edgewood, Chandra Pelichet of Detroit, MI and Nicole Price of Henderson.

Kentucky Defense Counsel Torts Award: The Kentucky Defense Counsel sponsor a $500 award to the first-year student who receives the highest grade in Torts for all sections of that class. Guy R. Colson '74 of Fowler, Measle & Bell was on hand to make the presentation to Laura Hougland of Louisville.

J. Richard Oexmann Criminal Law Award: The Oexmann Award is presented to the student who writes the best paper on a criminal law topic, as judged by a faculty committee. Professor Sarah Welling announced this year's recipient, Michael Zarocostas of Lexington, who won for his paper on "Hate, Crime and the First Amendment."

James E. Keller Family Law Awards: Louise Graham, Willburt Ham Professor of Law, and Judge James E. Keller '65, presented these awards for outstanding work in family law to Caroline E. Boeh '94 of Louisville and Margaret Jane Brannon of Maysville.

SPILF Fellowships: Professor Roberta M. Harding announced the students receiving summer fellowships from the Student Public Interest Law Foundation, as follows:

Blaine Early of Williamsburg, to work for the Commonwealth's Attorney of Whitley County;

Vincent E. Harding Public Interest Award: This award is funded by Robert E. Harding, Jr. '57 and Iola Harding, parents of Professor Roberta Harding, in memory of their son, who died at a very young age. The recipient is chosen by the faculty from among the students who have contributed to the public interest programs at the College of Law. This year's winner is Karen Mills of Ashland.

Dan M. Rose '84 of Stoll, Keenon & Park presenting the Gayle A. Mohny Law Scholarship to Jamus R. Redd of Cadiz.

National Association of Women Lawyers Award:

Given annually to the graduating student who shows promise to contribute to the advancement of women in the profession. This year's winner of the National Association of Women Lawyers Award was Angela Logan '94 of Springfield.

Thirteen incoming student merit scholarship recipients were announced at the ceremony. These scholarships are funded by College of Law alumni and friends, and are awarded for outstanding academic potential to succeed in law school. Several incoming student scholarships were not presented at Awards Night because the donor and recipient could not be present. The following scholarships were announced at Awards Night:

Andrews & Williams Scholarship: Presented by David M. Andrews '80 to Dustin C. Haley, an incoming student from Prestonsburg who is a graduate of Berea College.

Thomas P. Bell Memorial Scholarship: Presented to Benny C. Epling, an incoming student from Shelbyana in Pike County who is a graduate of UK.

Brown, Todd & Heyburn Scholarship: Presented by James Park, Jr. to incoming student Sarah Tankersley of Highland Heights, who graduated from Northern Kentucky University.

Richard D. Cooper Scholarship: Presented to incoming student Robert C. Carr of Harlan, a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University.

Charles M. Landrum, Jr. and Weldon Shouse Law Scholarships: Tom Cooper helped announce the recipients of these scholarships, who could not be present because of their undergraduate exams. The Charles M. Landrum, Jr. Scholar is Jerry Derifield of Louisa, a Centre College graduate, and the Weldon Shouse Scholar is Karen Smith of Frankfort, a graduate of Kentucky Wesleyan.

James Park, Sr. Scholarship: Presented by James Park, Jr. to Transylvania graduate Bryce H. Amburgey of Mallie in Knott County.

Colvin P. Rouse Centre College Scholarship: Presented to incoming student Kara L. Daniel of Lexington.

South Central Bell Scholarship: Presented by Creighton Mershon, counsel for South Central Bell in Louisville, to Ricky Glen Alsip, an incoming student from Corbin and a graduate of the UK College of Business and Economics.

At the end of the ceremony, Dean Shipley presented the Robert M. and Joanne K. Duncan Outstanding Teaching Award to Robert G. Lawson '63, W.L. Matthews Professor of Law.

Five law school staff members received Nancy M. Lewis Awards for their outstanding contributions to the College of Law in 1993-94. They are:

Deborah A. Wells, Associate Dean for Development
Marty N. Heuerman, Administrative Assistant, Dean's Office
Dee Wood, Cataloging Technician, UK Law Library
Cassandra D. Clements, Staff Assistant, Faculty
Joyce S. Saylor, Staff Assistant, Faculty

STUDENTS

A PRIMER ON THE ADMISSIONS PROCESS

By Carolyn M. Kennedy, Associate Dean

As Chair of the Admissions Committee, I have heard tales from a number of alumni about their admission to the College of Law in the days of 100% male applicants, no LSAT, returning soldiers who took no nonsense from young law professors, your residency and good grades virtually assuring your enrollment, etc.

I have also been asked countless questions about the people and the process nowadays, particularly from alumni who have a child ready to start applying, or a neighbor asking for a letter of recommendation, or a friend whose child has been denied admission. I have written this article to try to provide accurate, updated information to help you understand the process.

First, the number of people applying to the College of Law has changed. In the last several years we have averaged 1,200-1,300 applications for a targeted entering class of 145, so it is obvious that only a small percentage can be accepted.

The people who make the difficult decisions as to who the entering students will be are five faculty members, one of our law students and myself, comprising the College's Admissions Committee, appointed by the dean. The Committee meets every week for 1-2 hours during the spring semester to make the decisions for the following fall's class.

Before the committee meetings, the members review each file to be discussed. This "full file review" process guarantees that each word in the file will be read. At a minimum, the file must include the application form, a report of the applicant's LSAT score and undergraduate GPA and a personal statement written by him or her. Often a candidate will submit resumes, papers, letters of recommendation or articles written by or about him/her.

We encourage applicants to include whatever they deem relevant to their abilities and/or plans. In fact, our Bulletin always devotes approximately 5-7 pages on the admissions process and factors which the committee considers relevant and why. It explains also that there are no personal interviews because part of the process is to examine how applicants deal with the written word: they must write persuasively, address relevant issues and submit an application package for submission, demonstrating skills they will need for success in law school and in court.

The committee is charged with trying to predict the future: who are the most likely to be successful law students? To this end we value all material with relevant information, such as a letter from a faculty member with whom the applicant has worked closely. We discourage only the irrelevant, i.e. letters from political acquaintances or others who do not personally know of the abilities or work habits of the applicant. Collected data from over the years tells us that the most consistent predictors of success for this College are the LSAT, first, and then the undergraduate GPA, with the optimum performance usually by someone who has performed well in both areas, so these people are most likely to be admitted.

You can help both us and those you know who are interested in applying to law school. Encourage students early to do their best in college, because fewer and fewer applicants with GPA's below a 3.0 are admitted. Encourage them later to prepare just as thoroughly for the LSAT. Write a letter if you know an applicant's abilities, or help that person select a reference who would be a better choice. Proofread a personal statement. I suggest that no student put all of his or her eggs in one basket: urge applications to several schools. Ignore rumors.

Yes, admission is increasingly difficult but Kentucky residents are not losing seats to strangers. We know that our obligation is and will always be primarily to the Commonwealth and residents will always predominate at UK Law. At the same time, diversity in the class and in the profession is important; so, you will see a number of non-residents but they will be fewer and even more carefully chosen than the Kentuckians we admit. Please remember that you can call me or the dean if you have any questions, failures of faith, or ideas to share with us.

All admissions decisions are important and some are the most difficult responsibilities the committee members will have. They work hard to assure that every application is thoroughly considered and evaluated in a fair and consistent manner.

Still, the process is not perfect: some are admitted who do not succeed in law school. Some who are denied admission go on to other law schools and successful careers in the profession. Overall, however, experience has shown that the process provides us with successful law students and provides the bar with future leaders.

Nothing we can say will lessen the disappointment of a son, daughter, other relative or friend's being denied admission to law school. However, we hope that it will be understood that in the midst of growing numbers of applicants and ever increasing credentials, a rational, equitable, compassionate and thorough process is being followed in making these difficult decisions.

LAW ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Dear Fellow Alumni:

It was with a great deal of pleasure that I accepted the presidency of the UK Law Alumni Association at the KBA meeting in Lexington. Like many of you, I owe a great debt to my law school.

When I was asked to be on the Board of the Law Alumni Association, I had no understanding of how it worked. I knew that once a year I was asked for $25 to renew my membership in the Association followed by one or more requests to contribute to the College's Annual Fund. I didn't spend a lot of time thinking about what the different appeals meant, I simply wrote a check to one or the other or sometimes both and felt I had done my part for the law school.

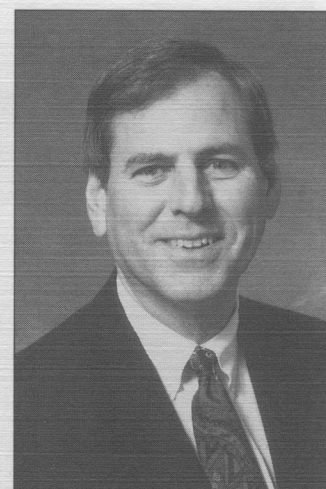

I now understand more fully the importance of each of these requests for our financial support. The requests to contribute to the law school's annual fund are important to the ongoing programs at the UK College of Law. That money keeps the moot court and trial advocacy teams running. It provides funds to publish this magazine. It enables the faculty to travel and present papers throughout the nation. It supplements deserving student scholarships. It's the money the Dean needs to operate the law school at a level fitting its growing national reputation.

The dues we are asked to pay for membership in the Law Alumni Association are for entirely different purposes. The $25 we send in each year represents the law school's only discretionary money. Our dues can be spent for virtually anything (without state restrictions) that the Association Board and the Dean feel is appropriate. We use Association dues to provide the annual reception for our alumni at the KBA convention and breakfast for our Lafferty Society Fellows, to supplement the charges for our annual Louisville and Lexington area alumni luncheons, to set up the tent this year at homecoming for all Law alumni, to support the overhead costs associated with our class reunions, and much more. As you can see, the money you spend for membership in the Law Alumni Association is spent on you-UK College of Law alumni.

This year, please join your Law Alumni Association AND contribute to the annual fund. The College of Law represents a major part of our lives-past and present. Help keep it strong and growing.

DEVELOPMENT

Thank You,

We can't say it enough, and we can't mean it more.

In this report, we gratefully acknowledge those alumni and friends who contributed to the University of Kentucky College of Law during 1993. These lists represent contributions to the law school for all purposes.

While we recognize those who made a financial commitment to the law school in 1993, we would be remiss not to also thank all of you who contributed in so many other ways. Some of you helped by donating professional materials to our Library, by sponsoring a cocktail party or luncheon to introduce Dean Shipley or by donating professional letterhead, envelopes and postage for our annual fund drive. Some of you helped by donating your time to help organize your class reunion or by serving as a class agent. We truly appreciate and benefited from these important contributions.

Gifts from alumni and friends of the UK College of Law totaled $635,894 for the calendar year ending December 31, 1993, and a notable 20 percent of law alumni contributed toward this successful fundraising year.

This generous support from alumni and friends, those who know the UK College of Law best, has been especially meaningful to the faculty, staff and students of your law school. All in all, the success of the UK College of Law is based on a number of elements working together to achieve our goals--the caliber of our students, the dedication of our faculty and volunteers, and most importantly, the ongoing support of our alumni and friends.

While the value of a legal education cannot be measured in dollars and cents, your support makes a critical difference in providing the opportunity for the College of Law to change and to reflect the growing needs of the legal profession. Thank you.

Deborah A. Wells

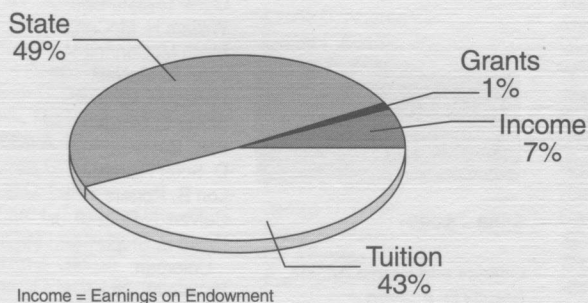

Associate Dean for Development and Alumni Affairs

THE IMPORTANCE OF PRIVATE SUPPORT AT A PUBLIC LAW SCHOOL

The Commonwealth of Kentucky provides for about 49% of the law school's budgetary needs, while tuition and fees cover the next 43% of the budget, and income from grants and other sources provide for the remaining 8%. The UK College of Law gratefully acknowledges this assistance.

The state's appropriations and tuition provide only for educational necessities. They keep the doors open, the lights burning. It is private support which gives the University of Kentucky College of Law its margin of excellence, and private support will take us to the next higher level.

TOTAL SUPPORT

Each year private support adds an additional $600,000 to the College's available funds. Unlike contributions to a private law school, however, donations to a public university are not used for daily operations. Rather, they are used to address higher, more human concerns. They provide for scholarships for gifted and deserving men and women who require financial assistance. They provide for faculty enhancements which allow the College to attract distinguished professors who are at the top of their fields--teachers who not only focus their superior talents on providing an exceptional education, but who can also help build bridges to the professional world for our graduates.

Much has been achieved by the UK College of Law and its graduates, but more needs to be done to prepare for the future. Competition for jobs is growing; competition to attract the brightest and best faculty and students nationwide is increasing; and, competition for the Commonwealth's financial resources for education is stiffer than ever.

As time and money continue to be at the center of the challenges we face at the UK College of Law, income from the state and from tuition will continue to provide for most of the basics. The mission of this law school, however, is to offer the very best for its students and its graduates--the best in legal education, and the best future following graduation. To fulfill this mission, we must go beyond the basics to make the UK College of Law a truly exceptional law school for the future.

REUNION WEEKEND '93

Seems Like Old Times

Members of the Classes of 1952, 1953, 1963, 1968, 1973, 1983, and the Senior Partners (graduates prior to 1944) joined their fellow classmates, colleagues, and former Law professors for a festive return to the College of Law last October.

Activities included Keeneland races, dinners, UK football, and individual class brunches. Our apologies to the Class of '83 for the lack of photographs from their 10-year reunion.

College of Law Class of 1968 celebrates 25 successful years.

The Classes of 1952 and 1953 join for a 40-year celebration.

Thirty years and many miles bring the Class of 1963 back for their reunion.

Reunion Weekend '93 continued

A celebration of 20 years brings the Class of 1973 back to Lexington.

College of Law Senior Partners (Graduates prior to 1943).

REUNION WEEKEND '94

Plans are being finalized for the celebration of Reunion Weekend '94 for the Classes of 1954, 1969, 1974, 1984, and 1989 in Lexington during UK Homecoming, October 28-30.

Most reunion classes will have brunch at Keeneland for the races on Friday followed by a reunion dinner; homecoming football and the Law Alumni Association Tent Party on Saturday; and concluding with class brunches on Sunday.

If you have not yet made your reservations for your class reunion, all events are still open (except Keeneland) and reservations can be made by calling (606) 257-3103 or (606) 257-3208.

Don't be left out of the fun and excitement of Reunion Weekend '94!

30 YEARS AND STILL GOING STRONG...

The College of Law's Class of 1964 started the reunion season off early with a spring reunion in April. Special congratulations and thanks go out to Lafferty Society members Joe Savage '64 and his wife Rosemary for planning the event and hosting the reunion dinner at their home. The turnout was impressive, and the members of the 30-year reunion class certainly rose to the occasion.

Also joining the class for the festivities were former professors Paul Oberst '39, Fred Whiteside and Eugene Mooney. The three professors were presented with T-shirts and awarded honorary Class of '64 alumni status.

The reunion activities culminated with a jovial reunion brunch in the foyer and on the lawn outside Old Lafferty Hall. Memories were running rampant and stories of the "good old days" at Lafferty were told again and again. The Class of 1954 will also be holding their reunion brunch at Old Lafferty during Reunion Weekend '94.

The Class of 1964 gathers for a festive 30-year celebration.

Professors Whiteside, Mooney and Oberst proudly display their official Class of '64 T-Shirts.

The Bert Combs Scholars

Bert Thomas Combs

During the Kentucky Bar Association Convention, donors, alumni and friends gathered on June 22, 1994 at the Radisson Hotel in Lexington for the presentation of the first two Bert Combs Scholars. The gala cocktail party and ceremony was sponsored by the law firm of Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs with offices in Louisville, Lexington, Frankfort, New Albany, Indiana and Nashville, Tennessee. Bert Combs was a distinguished member of the firm at the time of his death in 1991.

As of the presentation date, over $850,000 had been given or pledged toward the $1 million goal to establish the College of Law's most prestigious scholarships. Recipients of the Bert Combs Scholarships were chosen by a competition among the brightest and best applicants to the law school for the 1994-95 entering class. Both recipients will receive three-year, full tuition scholarships plus substantial living stipends.

The announcement was made by Governor Combs' long time friend, University of Kentucky Board of Trustees' Chair and Chair of the Steering Committee for the Campaign, Edward T. Breathitt '50. The first two recipients of the Bert Combs Scholarships are profiled on the following page.

Once fully funded, the endowment for the Bert Combs Scholars will provide full scholarships and living stipends to two students in each year's entering class. Applications for the 1995-96 awards can be obtained by calling (606) 257-1678 or writing the law school at 209 Law Building, Lexington, KY 40506-0048.

Richard C. Ward '64 and Edward T. Breathitt '50, both of the Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs firm, talk with Combs Scholar, Amy Cubbage.

Judge Sara Walter Combs (Governor Combs' widow) with Stewart E. Conner, managing partner of Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs.

Sarah Combs Kaufmann (Governor Combs' sister) greets C. Kilmer Combs '46 and his wife at the presentation of the Bert Combs Scholars.

Edward T. Breathitt '50 presenting one of the first two Bert Combs Scholarships to Amy Cabbage of Leitchfield.

Amy Denise Cabbage

Amy is a 1994 graduate of Georgetown College with a perfect 4.0 average and a double major in history and philosophy. She received the Academic Dean's Award, Georgetown's highest academic honor, along with awards for the best graduate in history and in philosophy.

For the past four summers, Amy clerked for David Williams, Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney for Grayson County. She is a graduate of Grayson County High School and lives in Leitchfield with her parents, Norman and Anita Cabbage.

Charles Merwin Grayson, III

Trey Grayson was graduated cum laude in 1994 from Harvard College in Cambridge, MA with a concentration in Government. While at Harvard, he served as Chair of the Kirkland House Committee and Co-Chair of the Institute of Politics Student Advisory Committee at the John F. Kennedy School of Government.

During summers, Trey has worked as a marketing assistant with Kelmar Foods in Cincinnati, as a law clerk in the Covington office of Deters, Benzinger, Lavelle and as an intern for Bob Babbage in the Kentucky State Auditor's Office.

Trey graduated first in his class from Dixie Heights High School in Fort Mitchell and lives in Crescent Springs with his parents, Merwin and Susan Grayson.

Edward T. Breathitt '50 presenting one of the first two Bert Combs Scholarships to Charles Grayson of Crescent Springs.

The Lafferty Society

The Lafferty Society is an organization established by the College of Law in 1977 to encourage giving to the College by its most supportive alumni and friends. It brings together individuals who share a desire to provide enduring and generous support and service for the law school.

To qualify for membership in the Lafferty Society one may make a gift of $10,000 or more in cash, securities or personal property; indicate the intention to contribute $10,000 or more within a ten-year period; or signify, by appropriate means, the intention to give $50,000 or more by means of a bequest, some form of permanent life insurance, or with a charitable remainder or other trust agreement.

The following list acknowledges the nearly 400 individuals who have so chosen to support the UK College of Law. For information on ways you might join this esteemed group, while enjoying the benefits of membership and possible tax savings, please contact Associate Dean Debbye Wells at (606) 257-3208.

Lionel Hawse '67 and his wife, Eleanor, are both individual members of the College of Law's Lafferty Society.

In Memory...

This year, the UK College of Law lost two distinguished alumni members of the Lafferty Society. In their memory and in their honor, memorial scholarship funds have been established by friends and family members.

Laramie L. Leatherman was a member of the College of Law's graduating class of 1953. Larry was past president of the UK College of Law Alumni Association and was an emeritus member of its Visiting Committee. He died in Louisville in March of this year.

Larry was an active volunteer for both the UK College of Law and the city of Louisville. At his death, he was managing partner for the law firm of Greenebaum Doll & McDonald in Louisville. In 1988, through his charitable contributions, Larry established the Laramie L Leatherman Professorship in the College of Law. His named Professorship is today held by law Professor Martin J. McMahon.

It was the express desire of Larry's wife, Portia, and the family that a memorial scholarship endowment be established in Larry's name to offer financial assistance to a needy student studying law at the University of Kentucky. Additional contributions to the Fund can be made by mailing checks to 203 Law Building, Lexington, KY 40506-0048.

John C. Darsie, Jr. received his undergraduate degree from UK in 1958 and was a member of the law school class of 1961. John died in April of this year after battling cancer for a year.

John and his wife Gay Elste Darsie '76 were members of the UK Fellows and the College of Law's Lafferty Society. In his nearly 30 years of service to the University, John served in the administrations of Presidents John W. Oswald, A.D. Kirwan, Otis A. Singletary, David Roselle and Charles Wethington. At the time of his death, he was General Counsel for UK.

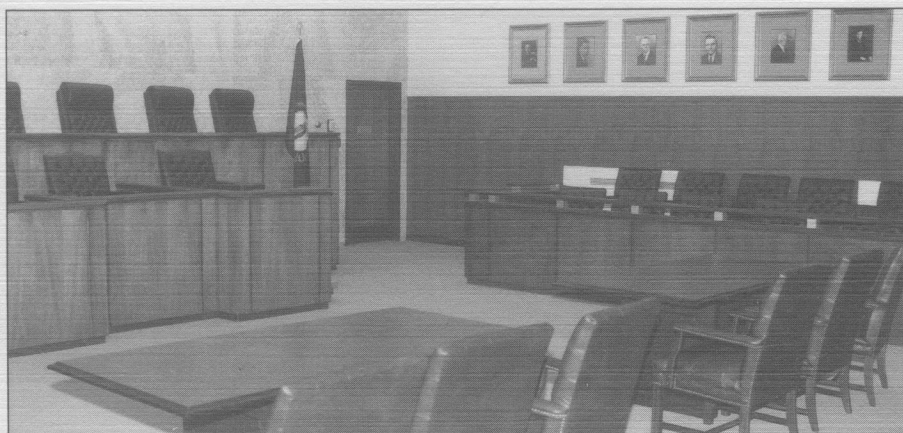

The John C. Darsie Jr. Memorial Scholarship Fund has been established to offer scholarship assistance for a student studying law at UK. Gifts may be made to the Fund by sending them to 203 Law Building, Lexington, KY 40506-0048 and marking checks for "The John Darsie Scholarship Fund."

BEFORE AND AFTER...

If it has been a while since you visited the College of Law's main courtroom, you're in for a surprise! Changes have happened--and more are coming in the near future.

As part of their 10-year reunion celebration, the College of Law Class of 1983 raised over $20,000 to refurbish the main auditorium/courtroom of the law school. The fundraising project was headed by Charles E. "Buzz" English, Jr. of Bowling Green, and the before and after shots below give you an idea of the success. New judges chairs, tables and chairs for the defense and prosecution teams, and FINALLY a jury box complete with new jurors' chairs now give law students a first hand view of what it's like to be in a real courtroom. The work was completed with new carpeting and an attractive wall plaque acknowledging the class members who contributed $100 and more toward the reunion project. Their names are listed below:

MIDYEAR Tax Planning Time How to Reduce your 1994 Taxes NOW

Congress continually fine-tunes the tax laws, but fortunately there are no major changes this year. After last year's eleventh-hour crunch to accommodate higher tax brackets, it's a relief this year to know what to expect.

Even so, some tax provisions have been indexed for inflation, and still others were enacted in 1993 but didn't take effect until January of this year. And tax planning really should be an annual affair, as you search for every legitimate deduction.

We'd like to help you as much as possible. So we're offering a free booklet, "Simple Ways to Reduce Income Taxes."

This informative, yet easy-to-read publication will explain the provisions (new and old) that affect most itemizing taxpayers, and suggest methods to reduce your level of taxation this year and in years to come.

For your free copy, please contact Debbye Wells, Associate Dean for Development, at 203 Law Building, Lexington, KY 40506-0048.

Charitable Remainder Trusts

A charitable remainder trust is one in which an individual makes a gift of assets but still receives income, usually for a period measured by the lives of the recipients of that income. Ultimately the remainder interest passes to a qualified charity like the College of Law on death. Charitable remainder trusts permit income and estate and gift tax deductions, if properly structured.

There are two types of trusts--annuity trusts and unitrusts. An annuity trust requires payment of a fixed amount. The individual beneficiaries will never receive more than this fixed amount, regardless of their needs. The beneficiary of this type of trust is negatively affected by inflation. Excess income that is earned increases the value of the trust assets, which ultimately go to the law school rather than the beneficiaries.

In contrast, unitrusts do not require the payment of a fixed amount each year. The beneficiary receives a fixed percentage of the value, but not less than 5 percent. This way, the beneficiaries will have a variable income stream that ideally will increase to compensate for inflation.

The value of the remainder interest is what qualifies for an income tax deduction. Consequently, you can make a gift today, retain an income stream, and still enjoy an income tax deduction.

In summary, both types of charitable remainder trusts, annuity and unitrusts, offer tax and other benefits. Both types of trusts create significant income tax deductions, with the tax savings reinvested to produce additional income for you. Appreciated property and stocks that are transferred may also avoid the large capital gain if planned appropriately. Also, the trust is free to sell the assets and provide greater diversification for the beneficiaries. The individual who creates the trust will enjoy the fact that these assets are outside of his or her estate.

When considering charitable giving to the UK College of Law, remember that it doesn't have to be purely charitable. Your self-interest can also be kept in mind. Charitable remainder trusts are an appropriate means of planning to help the law school and help yourself at the same time. There are few opportunities as good as this one left.

If you would like to discuss the benefits of establishing a charitable remainder trust with the UK College of Law, please contact either Dean Shipley at (606) 257-1678 or Associate Dean Debbye Wells at (606) 257-3208.

The Lafferty Society

The Lafferty Society is an organization established by the College of Law in 1977 to encourage giving to the College by its most supportive alumni and friends. It brings together individuals who share a desire to provide enduring and generous support and service for the law school.

To qualify for membership in the Lafferty Society one may make a gift of $10,000 or more in cash, securities or personal property; indicate the intention to contribute $10,000 or more within a ten-year period; or signify, by appropriate means, the intention to give $50,000 or more by means of a bequest, some form of permanent life insurance, or with a charitable remainder or other trust agreement.

The following list acknowledges the nearly 400 individuals who have so chosen to support the UK College of Law. For information on ways you might join this esteemed group, while enjoying the benefits of membership and possible tax savings, please contact Associate Dean Debbye Wells at (606) 257-3208.
